THE BATTLES ABOUT METZ.

Sharpest Conflict on Both Sides—Victory on of the Prussians on Sunday and Monday—The Emperor at Chalons—Metz and a New Army Send to Meet Him.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—I have just received express information, from trustworthy sources, relative to the operations at the front. It affords some particulars relating to the series of combats in which the French have been engaged for the last three days, which do not appear in the official dispatches or newspapers.

Fighting commenced near Metz at 3 o'clock in the afternoon on Sunday the 14th, just after the Emperor's departure. The battle was brought on by a Prussian attack on Gen. FROSSARD'S Division, which was in the act of withdrawing from its position.

The Fourth Corps, under Gen. L'ADMIRAULT, which formed the left wing of the army, sustained the brunt of the engagement. The attacking force was under Prince FREDERICK CHARLES, and Gen. STEINMETZ. While the Fourth Corps was occupying the attention of the enemy, the French Army continued its retreat, which was effected in the most orderly manner. Marshal BAZAINE exposed himself in the thickest of the fight, and had his horse killed under him. He himself is said to be slightly wounded in the foot.

The execution done by the French mitrailleuses was fearful. Four regiments of the Prussian Guard were nearly exterminated. Three or four French journalists shouldered their muskets, and fought gallantly side by side with the soldiers.

All was dark and stormy during the night, and on the next morning, when my informant visited the field, no remnant of either army was visible.

In this engagement the French lost 3,000, killed and wounded, and the Prussians 10,000. The disproportion is said to be owing to the terrible destruction caused by the French mitrailleuses and artillery.

On the evening of the 15th the French attacked the Prussians again at Gravelotte, where the Emperor had temporarily established the French head-quarters. The Prussian losses were again very great, and the French likewise lost heavily. Gravelotte is at the point of bifurcation of two roads leading to Verdun and Etain. The Fourth Corps is in advanced line, and three or four corps are concentrated in this locality. The bulk of the train and equipage has been sent on to Verdun under a powerful escort.

The Emperor is at Chalons, where a great battle will be fought with the aid of a new army, now being rapidly pushed forward to the scene of operations. Very large reinforcements are being dispatched, and as arms are abundant, there will be no difficulty in filling up the blanks lately created in the armies. The spirit of the people is everywhere patriotic, and the Prussians, as they advance, will have to encounter an enormous force on every side. R.

Prussian Accounts—Details of the Battle on Tuesday at Pont-a-Mousson—A Twelve-Hours' Fight—Victory Claimed for Prussia—Sunday's Conflict.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—The details of the combat at Pont-a-Mousson have just been received. Marshal BAZAINE endeavoring to fall back from Metz to Verdun was attacked at 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning by the Fifth Division and forced to face about. The Prussians were admirably firm, though they sustained the attack of four French corps, among them the Imperial Guard. After fighting gallantly for six hours the Prussian Fifth Division was reinforced from the Tenth Corps. These reinforcements arrived opportunely. The French found that a prolongation of the contest would be impossible, and retired upon Metz with a loss of 3,000 prisoners, two eagles and seven cannon. The French utterly disregarded the convention of Geneva, by mutilating the dead, firing on surgeons, ambulances, &c.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—The following official news has been made public here this morning:

PONT-A-MOUSSON, Wednesday Evening.—Gen. ALVENSLEBEN advanced yesterday with the Third Corps toward the east side of Metz. On the line of the enemy's retreat toward Verdun he encountered severe fighting with the divisions of Gens. DECAEN, L'ADMIRAULT, FROSSARD, CANROBERT and the Imperial Guard. Gen. ALVENSLEBEN was sustained successively by the Tenth Army Corps and by a detachment of the Eighth and the Ninth, commanded by Prince FREDERICK CHARLES. The enemy was driven in upon Metz, in spite of the great superiority of forces, after a severe combat of twelve hours. The losses on both sides were very heavy. The Prussian Gens. DOERING and WIDEL were killed, and Gens. RAUSCH and GEUSCHEN wounded. King WILLIAM today addressed the troops on the field of battle, which is gloriously maintained.

THE BATTLE ON SUNDAY.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—Gen. MANTEUFFEL telegraphs to the Government here relative to the battle of the 14th, dating his dispatch near Metz yesterday afternoon: "The French in heavy masses issued from Metz, and after a bloody engagement of three hours, the First Corps routed the enemy's right. Our troops fought with superb courage, carrying the enemy's positions by assault splendidly. I write without waiting to remove my helmet."

French Statement—The Prussians Repulsed Along the Whole Line—The Prince Royal of Prussia and Gen. Frossard Reported Wounded—A Review of the Situation up to Tuesday.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The different battles around Metz were fought by the troops of the Third and the Fourth Corps. About 40,000 French troops were engaged. The Prussian loss was very great and is computed at 20,000. The French loss is comparatively small owing to the aid afforded by the cannon of the adjacent fortresses. Having attacked Plaiboung unsuccessfully, the Prussians have retired six millionetres to the valley of Dorcasbain to secure their communications.

The following is from private sources: Marshal BAZAINE has declared that the enemy were repulsed along the whole line.

THE WOUNDED.

It is pretty certain that the Prince Royal of Prussia was wounded in one of the battles around Metz.

The following news is official:

Gen. FROSSARD is reported to have been grievously wounded in one of the battles around Metz.

THE ARMISTICE DEMANDED.

The Paris Press says the report that the Prussians had demanded an armistice in order to bury their dead, is fully confirmed, and praises Marshal BAZAINE for not according it. The peasants must bury the dead, and the army continue its work of annihilating the enemy. The French forces are increasing constantly, and the Prussians decreasing. The hour of the complete victory of France is near. There is great activity on the fortifications of Paris. Thousands of men are at work, putting the defenses in better condition.

RAILWAY CONNECTIONS SAVED.

The Soir says: "It was feared that certain important railway connections were to be cut by the enemy, which would thwart the present movements of the French Army. The General commanding at Chalons was sent with a strong column to prevent this movement of the Prussians, and to assure our communications. That column arrived in time and accomplished its mission."

REVIEW OF THE SITUATION.

La Patrie gives the following resumé of information received from its private sources: The army under Marshal BAZAINE, resting upon one of the strongest places in the world, occupied near Metz a position which enabled it to check the enemy and gain precious time. The Prussians decided to turn Metz, but BAZAINE knew their intention, and crossed the Moselle in several places at the same time. He was not surprised as has been said. He knew that he must soon meet the enemy and was prepared. By crossing the Moselle the French intended to fall back on Chalons, but the Prussians endeavored to cut the French line. Four times they attacked and were repulsed with great loss. The army of BAZAINE continued its march, and may be considered as certain to make a junction with the corps of MCMAHON and TROCHU. This result the Prussians have not been able to prevent, and it changes the situation vastly. BAZAINE will then be at the head of larger forces than those opposed to him, and when he wishes, may assume the offensive. This view of affairs is based on information from the scene of the hostilities, dated Tuesday, the 16th.

NO MORE REVERSES.

The French Government represents that the previous reverses of the army have been fully checked, and that the attempts of the enemy to interfere with the concentration of the corps at Chalons have been completely repulsed.

Reports Through London Channels—The French Hold Their Ground—Napoleon Reported at Rheims.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Telegrams from Paris this morning give the following résumé of events since Sunday last: On that day the French Army engaged the Prussians before Metz. The latter suffered heavy losses. The French retired on Verdun. On Monday the Emperor was at Gravelotte, with 60,000 men. Subsequently occurred engagements at Longueville, and at other places, the French constantly fighting and retreating, contesting every step. On Tuesday, the Emperor passed through Verdun, and reached Rheims, where he now is. In the serious engagements which occurred Tuesday near Gravelotte, the French held their ground, but suffered heavy losses.

PRESENT POSITION OF THE FRENCH ARMY.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The Times says: "All day Monday and a good part of Tuesday the French were fighting their way to get a position against the enemy on the rear and flank. Progress was consequently slow. On Tuesday night they had gotten no further than Etaen, sixteen miles from Metz. These are the only facts positively known."....The London papers have some three hundred words of war dispatches this morning, and less fresh than the American papers have every day.

Another Great Battle on Tuesday—Marshal Bazaine and the French Forces Victorious—Despite of the Flight.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—An official dispatch from Marshal BAZAINE, dated 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, says:

"Yesterday, late in the afternoon, we gave battle between Doncourt and Vionville. The enemy were driven back and we bivouacked on the positions we had taken. I halted in my movement for several hours in order to bring up a full supply of munitions. We had before us Prince FREDERICK CHARLES and Gen. STEINMETZ."

PRIVATE DISPATCHES.

The following dispatch is not official, but is given to the public by the Ministry:

VERDUN, Wednesday.—"The battle still continues on the side of Mars la Tour, and seems to be going in our favor. A number of wounded French and Prussian soldiers have been brought into Briey. A force of 1,300 Prussians is encamped on the plateau between Briey and Saint Jean. They send out couriers, who have entered Briey. Trustworthy parties, who have arrived here from Mars la Tour, speak of a heavy engagement there yesterday, with a large portion of the Prussian Army, which, they say, was charged with great vigor by our cavalry and the Garde Imperial, and was thrown back on the Moselle. It is rumored that Gens. BATTAILLE and FROSSARD are badly wounded."

THE TELEGRAPH.

Marshal BAZAINE has again stopped all private telegraphing, as by that means news reaches Berlin by way of London.

ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS.

PARIS, Aug. 18—Evening.—The following additional details of Tuesday's battle near Doncourt and Vionville have been obtained from official sources: Prince FREDERICK CHARLES attacked our right, and was firmly met. The corps of Gen. ARGAND, at Rezonville, hastened into the action, which ceased only with night. The Prussians repeatedly attacked us and were as often repulsed. Toward night a fresh corps sought to turn our position, but was beaten off. Our losses are serious. Gen. BATTAILLE is wounded. By 8 o'clock in the evening the enemy was repulsed along the entire line. He had 120,000 men engaged.

THE REPORT FROM LONDON.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—A telegram from Briey, a town fourteen miles north-east of Metz, has the following: "An obstinate struggle occurred near Mars la Tour, yesterday. It is supposed the engagement was general. Large numbers of wounded of both armies are arriving at Briey. Travelers report that a vast number of Prussians have been thrown back upon the Moselle by the Imperial Guard. The Prussian artillery was heard distinctly between Briey and Saint Jean."

Reported Junction of the French Forces Near Chalons—Positive Relves Away from Metz—The Situation at Thionville and Strasbourg.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The junction of the armies of BAZAINE and MCMAHON is momentarily expected at Vitry le Francois, near Chalons, where the French are expected to make a new stand.

The commandant at Metz, on account of the deficiency of food, drives away the fugitives who throng into the city.

THIONVILLE.

Thionville still remains in our hands. A Prussian column recently approached too near the town, and was saluted with a discharge of artillery. The enemy fell back with precipitation, and has since kept at a respectful distance.

STRASBOURG.

The investment of Strasbourg is so slack that French troops have entered and reinforced the garrison. Provisions have also been carried there without attempt at capture. A Paymaster of the French Army left there with a large amount of treasure, without any hindrance whatever. It would seem that as the Prussians have no siege trains, they have given up the idea of a regular siege.

Minor Reports—Bazaine's Movements Approved—The Prussian Advance—Letter of Edmond About.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The Gaulois says encouraging dispatches have been received from Marshal BAZAINE, but they must be kept secret as yet, to prevent any hints of the Marshal's plans from reaching the enemy....A private dispatch dated Thionville, Monday, 4 P. M., says: "The cannonading of the Prussians commenced at 3 o'clock, and lasts yet. Many of the enemy have been placed hors de combat"....L'Ami says all military authorities approve of the retreat from Metz....M. ABOUT, the correspondent of the Soir, describes the entrance of the Prussians into Saverne. He says they do not maltreat the country people, but exact requisitions out of proportion to the population. Large sums of money and enormous quantities of bread, tobacco, wine, beef and forage are demanded. At all places where the people resist the Prussians are very cruel, but otherwise they are disposed to be orderly, quiet and kind. Many peasants kill their horses to prevent the Prussians from taking them.

THE BATTLE OF WOERTH.

Scenes After the Conflict—A Descriptive Letter from a French Journalist.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—EDMUND ABOUT describes the scenes after the battle of Woerth as follows:

"One sees solid regiments who proudly retreat, while a few bad soldiers, disbanded, lost, demoralized and disarmed, throw themselves desperately into each by-path. I arrived just in time to stop three wretched Turcos mounted on artillery horses as they were entering an old quarry with the hope of making a short cut from the field. Our artillery must have been roughly used, so many caissons pass along the road without guns. But here come one or two regiments of the line, quite firm, tolerably complete in numbers, rifle on shoulder and knapsack on back. Behind them Marshal MCMAHON, calm, dignified, almost smiling, and fresh as a rose. I salute him as he passes. He responds without noticing me. One of his Aids, M. D'ALSAC, names me. Then the old hero stops, and tells me quite simply the story of his defeat, thus: 'I had only 35,000 men, and I found 150,000 in front of me. We have given way before numbers. They have killed or wounded about 5,000 men. But we shall have our revenge. Explain this to the public. But where are you going in that direction?' 'To Saverne,' I reply. 'You will be captured. The Prussians will be there in two hours,' says the General. 'I have my wife and children there,' I answer. 'God preserve you.' 'Do not fail to say that the morale of the troops is excellent.' We shake hands. I exchange a few pleasant words with M. D'ALSAC, and I search vainly in the ranks of the staff, as it moves on, for the laughing and kindly face of M. DE VOGUE, Officer of Ordnance. This fine young man, full of promise, was killed by a bullet through the forehead, and Gen. COLSON with a bullet through the heart. Both of them were struck by the side of the Marshal, who was reckless of his life. Last comes a regiment of Turcos, the most complete and finest of the three. These fellows have not thrown away their knapsacks nor their arms. One of the first comes out of the ranks and clasps me round the neck. It is ALBERT DURY, a fellow-journalist, and the excellent fellow begins by telling me: 'I have been to your house. It is empty. All your people are safe but you. I, as you see, am firm as a post. Oh! my poor friends! What a disaster! We will repair it, though.' He runs off, and disappears in the motley crowd of his comrades. A little further on I saw a civilian, dressed in a short coat of grey velvet, who marches like an officer between two companies of the line. It is M. GAILDRAN, the artist of the Illustration, an old friend of the day before yesterday.

He carries his portfolio across his back, and tomorrow morning, at Pfalsbourg, he will, no doubt, make a sketch of this shameful retreat. At the gates of Saverne the panic-stricken are flying along the railway, or are hiding in the gardens; but some good regiments of the line are tramping in step through the streets. Their passage, calm and courageous, is not over before 11 o'clock at night. These last belong to the Fifth Corps. They reached Reichshoffen too late to give battle. I find the little town a prey to a panic really fabulous. Marshal MCMAHON arrived there on Saturday night, at 11 o'clock, followed by the remains of his army, and proceeded by a swarm of breathless fugitives. In the twinkling of an eye Saverne saw itself filled with the First Corps, which the foe luckily believed to have retired upon Bitche. They messed together where they could, those most fortunate in the houses of the townmen, those who had brought away their knapsacks and camp-equipage under their tents, many upon the pavement and in the fields under heaven's canopy. The night was passed in terror. If the enemy had known how to profit by the opportunity, he might have made 10,000 or 15,000 prisoners at one blow. The population was only half reassured by the presence of troops broken down, starved and disorganized. Some families got off by the mail train at midday, the last that went from Strasbourg."

RAVAL MOVEMENTS.

The Naval Press—Naval Engagement in the Baltic—The Danish Squadron Shows for Sea.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—Advices have just been received here of a naval engagement off the west of the island of Rugen, in the Baltic. One division of the Prussian fleet, consisting of an avisc, and the gun-boats Drache, Blitz and Salamander, yesterday afternoon, at a o'clock, encountered the French fleet, consisting of four armored frigates, a corvette and an avisc. The Prussian fleet withdrew without loss. The French fleet is now off Dornbusch.

FRENCH NAVAL ORDERS.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The officers of the French fleet now in the Baltic have received orders to claim at each commercial port of Prussia an indemnity double the amount of each contribution exacted by the Prussians in those ports of France now under their control.

AN INCIDENT.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The Pays this morning says: "Two days ago the French vessels of war captured an English vessel in the English Channel laden with articles contraband of war, destined for Prussia. When the Captain was questioned how he dare do this, he replied: 'that he knew a revolution was about to occur in Paris, and as the French fleet would therefore probably be recalled, he thought he could run the risk.' The Pays comments upon this reply and says that the same impression regarding a revolutionary outbreak in Paris exists in Germany, and is one of the schemes of BISMARCK."

GERMAN WARE CAPTURED.

The Moniteur de la Flotte publishes a list of German vessels captured since the commencement of the war. They are eleven in number.

PARIS.

The Defense of the Capital—Great Activity—Departure of Olivier for Italy—Precautions of the Bonaparte Family—Prussian Spies in the City.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The entire garrison of Paris is busy day and night making cartridges. The Opinion Nationale nevertheless complains of Count DE PALIKAO'S sluggishness. By Saturday, 1,000 guns will be mounted on the Paris fortifications, one-fourth served by numerous but inexperienced hands. Gen. MELLINET has been assigned to the command of the Garde Mobile. The Prefect of the Rhine urges the destruction of all the railways and bridges, and the sending of all able-bodied men to Chalons.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—There is immense activity at the Paris defenses. The laborers are absolutely swarming on the fortifications. It is hinted that this measure of strengthening the works is due more to a wish to keep a dangerous class busy than to any actual fear.

FLIGHT OF OLLIVIER.

PARIS, Aug. 18—Noon.—The Temps today says: "M. EMILE OLLIVIER, the Ex-Prime Minister, and his wife, have gone to Italy." His departure at such a moment is severely commented upon. The Prince NAPOLEON has sent all his children and valuables to Italy, against the earnest remonstrance of the Empress. The Gaulois says PIERRE BONAPARTE has gone to Corsica.

PRUSSIAN SPIES IN PARIS.

The French authorities continue to send away Germans who are considered suspicious. The Journal of France says, in this connection, that "even in the boudoirs of the great ladies must research be made for the enemies of the country!" The article creates a sensation.

Gen. Trochu in Command of the Paris Forces—A Proclamation—Memoir on Marshal McMahon—Ministers, Washburne—Miscellaneous.

PARIS, Aug. 18—Evening.—Gen. TROCHU has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of all the forces at Paris, and has issued a proclamation counseling order and calmness not only in the streets of the city, but a spirit of resignation under the trials consequent upon the situation. He says that France must have the demeanor of a great military nation conducting its own destinies, and the Government will gain the confidence of the people by showing the greatest confidence in them. He appeals to all men and to all parties, saying that he belongs himself to no party save to that of his country, and declares that all good citizens must by moral restraint keep down those who see in public misfortunes only an opportunity to satisfy their own detestable designs....Gen. BARBIS takes the place of Major-Gen. LE BRUN, who has resigned.

M'MAHON'S SWORD.

The Figaro (newspaper) proposes the presentation of a sword of honor to Marshal MACMAHON, and the subscription started for that purpose is already very large.

A LARGE HOSPITAL.

The Chateau Chambord has been placed at the disposal of the authorities by the Count DE CHAMBORD as a military hospital. It contains 440 rooms, 300 of which are unfurnished, and all have chimneys and are admirably adapted for the uses to which their noble owner has so patriotically devoted them.

THE AMERICAN MINISTER.

Mr. WASHBURNE, the American Minister, finds himself overwhelmed with the consequences of assuming protection of Prussian subjects.

NOTES.

It was rumored this morning that a demonstration would be made around the hall of the Corps Legislatif about 3 o'clock P. M....The theatres are nearly all closed....The Senate was in session today. The Corps Legislatif had adjourned to await further news from the scene of hostilities....The Journal des Débats prints an absurd story that the King of Prussia, desiring to be consecrated Emperor of Germany by the Pope, has offered His Holiness an asylum in Germany.

The Villette Affair—Fresh Arrests—Firearms as Soldiers.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—Fresh arrests were made yesterday in the Quartier du Pantheon. It is supposed the parties taken into custody were implicated in the affair of the Boulevard de la Villette.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The Bremen have been enlisted as soldiers, and throng the streets of Paris, the Gaulois says, to the number of 100,000. They wear their brass helmets and are armed.

THE CORPS LEGISLATIF.

The Last Session—Amusing Statement of the Minister of War—A Prussian Bee-Hive Announced—Provisioning Paris.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The last meeting of the Corps Legislatif was interesting. A great crowd of people had collected around the hall to hear the war news. The National Guard was at its post to preserve order, but no soldiers were seen. At the commencement of the session, Count PALIKAO, the new Minister of War, spoke as follows:

The Chambers will understand that I cannot give precise details as to the numbers of troops engaged, the casualties, &c. I cannot even state the result of the engagement, but I may say that the enemy has made an ineffectual attempt to capture Pfalsbourg and lost fifteen hundred men killed. This repulse has had a great effect both on the enemy and the people of that part of France. The moment the Government has information of the great movements now taking place I will communicate it to the Chambers. The Minister then withdrew.

Deputy JULES FAVRE then took the floor, and requested that the utmost severity be shown the rioters and assassins of Villette.

M. THIERS suggested that in case of a siege of Paris, the peasants be allowed to enter the city with their grain and cattle, and that the State reimburse them for their property. He also recommended that the Chambers now meet daily.

Minister DUVERNOIS, in reply to M. THIERS, said the Government had intended to fully provision Paris.

The Deputies, after a consultation, decided to meet again today.

LONDON WAR NOTES.

British Sympathy—A Belligerent and Small Land—Embarrassment—Sheridan—Victor Hugo's Appeal—Refusal a Respite—Prussian Celebrations in England—The Marriage.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The Times eloquently pleads for aid for the French and German wounded, and says future results will depend on the development of the resources of the hostile Powers, and declares that a transfer of Alsace to Prussia would violate the sacred principle of national sovereignty, and conflict with a permanent restoration of peace. Cambridge University has subscribed a handsome sum for the wounded in the Franco-Prussian war. The Daily News today says, semi-officially, that English hopes of succeeding in intervention have been abandoned. The French Ambassador at Brussels has refused FRANCISCO HUGO, son of VICTOR HUGO, a passport to Paris. The French victories have been celebrated at several points in Ireland, where the Prussian accounts find no credit....A better tone generally prevails in the Liverpool market. At Antwerp confidence is restored, and business has resumed its ordinary course. German dealers dealing in petroleum, and others connected with American trade, are especially confident, and look forward to a favorable result of the war....The French continue to report that the last Prussian loan is a failure.

More Gossip in London About the Flight of the Bonapartes—M. Thiers and the Corps Legislatif—Paris to be Defended at all Cost.

LONDON, Aug. 18—Midnight.—We have it on high authority, fresh from Paris, that it is the universal conviction there that the Napoleonic dynasty is ended. The Empress having packed up and dispatched all her valuables, including pictures of inestimable price, has left for England by way of Belgium. It is believed that the Emperor is also on the way to this country by the same track. He does not dare to return to Paris. Prince NAPOLEON has fled to Italy with his family....M. THIERS told the Corps Legislatif, yesterday, that the enemy must be resisted at all cost to the last. He advised prompt action. The surrounding population should be obliged to bring their cattle, crops and food within the walls, and then the entire region in sight of Paris should be laid waste, if necessary. M. DUVERNOIS, Minister of Commerce, said the Government was ready to guarantee them provisions, shelter and subsistence.

PROPOSED RESULTS OF THE WAR.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—The Provincial Correspondence says that in resuming possession of the former German provinces of the Rhine Prussia means to reimburse her plundered subjects expelled from France.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—A well-informed diplomat says that Prussia will exact no surrender of French soil, but will insist on the exclusion of the BONAPARTE family from the throne of France. Other terms of peace, not reconcilable with the French amour propre, including, doubtless, a partial reimbursement of the cost of the war may be added. The political restoration of the House of ORLEANS is currently discussed as probable.

THE RECENT TROUBLES IN FRANCE.

The coincidence in time of the recent revolutionary outbreaks in Paris and in the south of France suggests to the Police evidence of a combined attempt to declare the Republic. The testimony of the prisoners concerned in the affair of the Boulevard de la Villette, on Monday last, is withheld. Indiscreet Prussians have been mobbed at Burdeaux.

FOUR DAYS OF FIGHTING.

Narrative of Events from Sunday to Wednesday—The Positions Occupied and the Troops Engaged—The Situation According to the Latest Advices.

By slow degrees the accounts of the obstinate struggle which during the last few days has been waged in and near the valley of the Moselle begin to assume a certain degree of intelligible cohesion. On Saturday last, by the occupation of Nancy and the capture of the important railroad depots of Frouard and Pont-a-Mousson, the French position around Metz became isolated from the natural connection with its base of supplies, and the army assumed there was in danger of finding the enemy both in front, flank and rear. Under such circumstances retreat would have become impossible, and defeat would have proved doubly disastrous. The decision of the French Commander-in-Chief seems to have been promptly taken, and this, it now appears, was neither to make a stand on the Metz ser in the Alsacian, but to fall at once back upon his reserves of 200,000 men, which under Gen. TROCHU were being formed at Chalons. To appreciate the significance of the fighting of the last few days it is necessary to bear in mind that the distance between Metz and Chalons is about eighty miles; that a railroad with a single track, of which Etain, Verdun and St. Menehould are the chief depots, connects them, as also a provincial highway following nearly the same direction. The importance of engaging the French forces, demoralized as they are to some extent by recent defeats, previous to forming a junction with the new army at Chalons, must also be kept in view in estimating the results of the fighting which the Prussians have so obstinately urged.

On Sunday morning the French retreat from Metz appears to have commenced. By 3 o'clock in the afternoon the advanced guard was on the way, and the Emperor had just taken his departure along with another division of what was a fortnight ago denominated the Army of the Rhine. Judging that it was the intention of the Prussians to break the continuity of his line, Marshal BAZAINE was at this time engaged in transporting his troops to the left bank of the Moselle, by the bridge, at the fortress and at several other points, when the First and Seventh Prussian Army Corps, commanded respectively by Gen. MONTEUFFEL and Gen. TAUNOW, appeared in close rear, and commenced an attack with the view of intercepting their retreat. The Fourth French Corps, under the command of Gen. FROSSARD, appears to have sustained the brunt of this attack, and, as indicated by our special dispatch, the main body of the army underwent the ordeal of fire. The old Guard, from the glory of the forlorn, evidently contributed to cover the retrograde movement of the French and to recross the Prussian line. After a conflict of seven or three hours duration, the corps of Gen. FROSSARD retreated toward the fortress, while the left of the French army had occupied in force the opposite bank of the Moselle, and the advance guard had obviously been summoned to arrest the march, so that unknown communication might be maintained along the entire line. The attacking force of the Prussians evidently bivouacked on Sunday night, immediately beyond range of the guns of Metz. The French claim that their casualties best 12,000 men, while they estimate their own loss at 5,000.

A few miles after leaving Metz the main highway branches off into two lines, both again converging at Verdun, and forming a sort of long irregular loop, whose extreme breadth is about five miles and its length about twenty-five. In the westerly section of this loop formed by the two roads the greater part of the fighting of the last few days seems to have taken place. First we find the Emperor with 60,000 men on Monday at Gravelotte, a village near the bifurcation of the two lines of highway. Against the Prussians, who were advancing by a flank movement to cut off his retreat, an attack was made at this point. At best this struggle could only have been a brief one as the close of the day, and, though heavy losses are reported on both sides, it seems to have ended by leaving the troops engaged in pretty much the same position as they were before.

On Tuesday a struggle of more importance commenced at Vionville, another village on the lower line of road, five miles beyond Gravelotte, and therefore about twelve miles from Metz. To understand the Prussian plan of attack it is necessary to recall the fact that these lines of road entered to run at right angles to the position which the Prussians have taken up along the valley of the Moselle. Taking a line therefore running due south from Metz to Pont-a-Mousson, a distance of about fifteen miles on one side of a triangle, and the road leading out of Metz, still commanded by the French troops as a second, the course necessarily followed by the Prussian Generals after crossing to the left bank of the river at Pont-a-Mousson, or elsewhere, in order to turn the advance of the French, would represent the third side, striking off at an acute angle from the Moselle. On Tuesday morning the Prussians made a movement in force from Pont-a-Mousson, toward Metz. The Third Army Corps, under Gen. von ALVENSLEBEN II., appears to have first advanced, and to have encountered four divisions of the French Army posted between Vionville and Doncourt, that is, on a line about four miles long, running from south to north, and resting on the road between Metz and Verdun. The attack began at 9 o'clock in the morning, and continued till afternoon. The Prussians would inevitably have suffered a severe defeat had not reinforcements arrived from the Tenth, Eighth and Ninth Army Corps. Whether the battle, which continued until dusk, ended in the French making another retreat upon Metz, or in the Prussians being driven back to the Moselle, is, in view of the contradictory dispatches from Paris or Berlin, a matter which the reader may settle according to his taste or sympathy. It may not be superfluous to note, that previous to the publication of the official bulletin in Berlin, another version of this affair has been transmitted, which at first sight appears to refer to another movement on Tuesday. The statement from French sources that the Prussians had 120,000 men engaged doubtless arises from the fact of four different army corps being in the action, but from the Berlin dispatches it would appear that only the Third was in complete force. The close juxtaposition of the retiring French columns is obvious from the statement that Gen. ARGAND hastened into this action from Rezonville, a village about two miles nearer Metz than the point on which the four divisions first attacked were posted.

If any reliance can be placed on two somewhat hazy dispatches, one from Verdun and another by way of London from Briey, a town fourteen miles north-east of Metz, the battle of Tuesday was renewed on Wednesday morning. Mars-la-Tour, mentioned in these dispatches, is a village two miles further on than the scene of Tuesday's conflict. The town of Briey, from which the news came, and where the wounded were arriving, is at least twelve miles due north of this point, so that the fighting was probably done in the valley of the Orne, one of the larger tributaries of the Moselle, that flows in a north-easterly direction between the two places. About the magnitude or result of this battle it is still impossible to speak. It appears most probable, however, that the main body of the French forces had on Wednesday made good their retreat as far as Verdun at least, and that from that point an unmolested march of about forty miles was expected to be had toward Chalons.

CITY WAR NEWS.

German Patriotic Festival.

A "fraternal festival" will be held by the Germans of this City at Jones' Wood to day, in celebration of the political union of Germany, as produced by the French-German war. The Germans of this City feel much elated at that union, although those who are naturalized citizens of this country, will derive no political advantage from it, and it makes even the intercourse among themselves more friendly than it was before.

French National Subscriptions.

The French Executive Committee of this City, for receiving subscriptions for the aid of French soldiers wounded during the present European war, held their regular weekly meeting at No. 21 West Houston-street last evening, Mr. P. A. GERDY, the President, in the chair, and Mr. LEON MEUNIER, Secretary. Mr. A. VAN ANLE, Jr., the Treasurer, received the collections of the members present during the past week, amounting to $1,472, which sum, added to the amounts received by him before, gives a total sum thus far received of $23,296 76. The following is a list of the principal subscriptions in addition to the lists published in the Times before: Daniel St. Amant & Son, $100; Henry A. Sinn & Son, $100; Louis Lorel, $100; Victor de Lamarque, $100; A. Bruissard, of Brooklyn, $100; Victor Bishop, $100; French employes at the Hoffman House, $100; Passon, Harriman & Co., $100. A letter was received from Miss O. Bousson stating that she had sent a box of lint by last Saturday's French steamer to France, and that another boxful was in preparation to be sent off by the next Tuesday's steamer. The sum of $20 gold was received by the Committee, presented by T. T. MULDOON, an Irishman, and a roundsman of the Twenty-sixth Precinct Police, for the French soldier capturing the first German flag. Among the above subscriptions, some are from other places of the United States. The Frenchmen of San Francisco and New Orleans are sending their collections directly to France.

A letter from Havana, Cuba, received in this City day before yesterday, contained the following list of subscriptions, made by Frenchmen residing there, for the aid of French soldiers wounded in the war: M. A. de la Forest, $400; Pierre Lacoste, $1,000; F. Dilligy, $500; Durrutty, Chaillhair & Co., $500; Adolphe Tulane, $200; Jean Sicard, $200; Clément Caro, $200; Joseph Roque Marquette, $200; Ed. Mathieu, $200; Carr Hickburn & Bott, $200; Morgan, $200; Total, $4,300.

"THE POWER OF FRANCE."

A French Review of the Situation—Causes of the Superiority of the Prussian Army—The Real Enemies at Home—Who Betray Certainly.

Translated from the Courrier des Etats Unis, Aug. 13.

"Six weeks have passed since war was declared. France, it was said, is prepared, and we can attack Prussia, who is not prepared. We have a formidable army ready; one word will be sufficient to hurl it against the enemy, and make a gap extending at least to the Rhine.... The word was spoken, the thunderbolt released, and we have remained under arms for two weeks. Meanwhile the Prussian forces rushed forward; they spread over our frontier; they fell upon our territory like an avalanche, and they are, in fine, to the number of six or eight hundred thousand, or, perhaps, even a million of men, in the presence of our army, which they press, push, harass, and threaten to crush under the weight of their numbers. How does it happen that they number so many and we so few? This is the question which we hear constantly asked, and to which it is time to give an answer.

All Prussia is a camp; for a long time has she been a military organization; the entire male population is enrolled. There is, first, the regular army; then the Landwehr and the Landsturm; these denominations embrace all; every other branch of the service besides the regular army has, like it, its battalions, its staff, its equipment and armament; all that is necessary to the order, and every one has his place, his regiment, his company and his rendezvous. A beat of the drum and everybody is in arms; nothing can keep them back, neither business, affections, work-shops, nor families—everything is forsaken at the first call, and there you have a million of men ready with their knapsacks on their backs. And that shows how it is that the Prussians appear by hundreds of thousands in one, two, three, or even four places at the same time, while we have only our regular army of two or three hundred thousand men with which to defend a frontier over fifty leagues in extent. In fact, Prussia was ready and France was not. We sought to invade Germany and Germany has invaded us. We sought for Rhenish frontiers, and lo! today we see the hordes of the Uhlans bathing in the Meuse. Where will this stop, and must we be reduced to see our country contracted, foot by foot, until the ditches of Paris form our last intrenchment? Stop there, if you please, and let us examine our condition.

Prussia was ready and France was not; but at this date Prussia has, we hope, gathered all the advantages she can from her relative superiority; our turn has come; the lesson has been a hard one, but we have profited by it; it is time for us to resume the ascendency which belongs to us, and the retaliation will, we feel certain, be far more brilliant than were the first lost steps disastrous. Our population is equal to that of Prussia; we have therefore as many men capable of bearing arms. What is necessary, is to turn them into soldiers. What we lack is that regimental discipline, and that military organization equivalent to the Landwehr and the Landsturm of the Prussians. This organization has been perfected, and this is now accomplished. The National Garde Mobile is today a numerous force, young, vigorous, fiery, and which counts its hundreds of thousands of men rushing to face the enemy, which force having already doubled, will soon treble the numbers of our regular army, while from one end of France to the other the National Garde Sédentaire receives muskets and cartridges, which at the proper time will be amply able to strike a hard blow at the enemy. Yes; no longer shall we be forced to see, as at Woerth, 35,000 heroes sustain the attack of 140,000; equal in number, we have no longer cause to fear an enemy, too much satisfied with its ephemeral successes, and we will answer with victories the cowardly attacks of those pitiable enemies who, each morning, ambuscaded behind the impunity of their mercenary libels, pour out upon our brave army and on our noble country their venomous irony and their hateful calumnies. Has not the sentence "decayed and dissolved" been already proclaimed against France, so vigorous, so literal, so full of life and vigor? Have not her character and her morals been defamed? Do they not cry out that we have degenerated, and that we have reached the period of "down with the Empire?"

Very good! the answer will not be long in coming. As light comes by lightning, we have to sigh for Military Activity—Petulant Conduct of the Chambers—A Strange Scene—Infallibility—Superstition of the Romans—The French Evacuation—Slight Disturbance in Milan.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Wednesday, July 27, 1870.

There is a hush of expectation like that of the interval between the lighting of the match and the explosion of the mine. The shock of a great battle, if it does not throw us all off our feet, will at least clear away some of the clouds which now hinder us from having any clear view of what is to succeed. Here there is such an active movement of soldiers, of the classes called to join once more their regiments that the aspect of the capital is really that of warlike times. I do not think that the feeling in Italy is one of great anxiety; for the direction of affairs are wisely delegated that the country shall not be dragged into war. The calm, however, is not universal.

POLITICAL EXCESSES.

We have witnessed, first and last, in the lower House of our Federal Legislature some scenes not less tempestuous than discreditable. It is a young country, and, given to persons, it used to be said by indulgent critics; but the Constitution is safe, no matter how abominable the conduct of Representatives may be. Unity is power in freedom, and the Democracy in Parliament is sometimes forgetful of a sense of decorum, or within little more than a week we have had one or two illustrations. The last was two days back, when the opposition in the lower House, to hinder a vote not in accordance with its wishes, broke out into open riot, with catcalls, pounding upon the floor and seats, and finally getting up in a body and going out of the Chamber to pout in the lobby for a full half hour. The presiding officer, to put a check as far as possible upon such disorder, rings his bell and calls, with the full strength of his lungs, to the members to be mindful of their duty, and not commit an outrage upon the dignity of the State. No heed is paid to his appeals, and he puts on his hat and sits until the storm is passed, like a peaceful genius invoking order out of chaos. Order comes at last, and the work of the Chamber goes on.

THE LOAN.

The convention with the National Bank, so long under discussion, yesterday became a law, and the Government is to have from that institution the sum, of 120,000,000 francs in paper money and in gold, which is to help make both ends meet. The Ministry has been again tormented with questions about alliances, brigandage, Rome, internal disorders, and universal republic schemes, and has been able to make such replies as to satisfy the majority and obtain a vote of confidence from the Chamber, an issue which, when distinctly raised, it frankly accepted, and even challenged.

THE PROCLAMATION OF INFALLIBILITY.

In speaking of the closing up of the infallibility question in the Roman Council, I omitted to mention one or two facts worthy so be taken notice of. None of the diplomatic agents were present to hear the proclamation of the dogma; an omission and sign of condemnation the more marked, because the Pope himself was presiding in the public congregation. Another incident is to be noticed, because of the effect which it had upon the Roman population. While the ceremony of proclamation was going on in St. Peter's, a thunder-storm, which had been gathering in the heated atmosphere, broke over the city. The rain poured as if the fountains of heaven were broken up, and the thunder-crashes gathered new force from the echoes under the great cupola of the church. From the Cardinals down to the most ignorant of the population, superstition is the prevailing sentiment of the Roman mind. Such a commotion of the elements, at such a moment, did not fail to make an impression. Some believed that the tempest was a sign of the wrath of heaven, while others insisted that it was the noise of Sinai on the announcement of the new law. Rome has the Pope, but it has not forgotten PASQUIL, and his dilapidated lips still crack jokes even at the expense of the Holy Father. To this must be added that there was no such boisterous fanfaronade of bell-ringing, cannon-firing and illuminations, as the highfaluting telegraph told you was to follow the proclamation of the dogma. There was a demonstration, but its languor was almost sickly, for the report was once more circulated that the French were to leave Rome.

THE FRENCH.

About this last we do not know what to think. The Ministerial organ here has distinctly stated that the evacuation is to take place as the result of diplomatic combinations. But no day is named, and the soldiers are still there, and we have seen so many tricks of French policy that we shall only believe when the event is accomplished. But in case an understanding is in a way to be arrived at, it is probable, as has been asserted, that the Italian Government would prefer to have the troops remain for a moment longer, to relieve it from embarrassment. Bands are ready to precipitate events, and throw thousands upon Rome; but one thing is clear, that the capital cannot be obtained in an irregular way. "The Italian Government," the Marquis VISCONTI VENOSTA said, "is decided not to profit by the present grave situation of affairs and the embarrassment of France, to settle the Roman question, nor will it resort to violence or the use of irregular means." The declaration was received with warm approval by the majority of the Chamber.

A FLURRY OF REVOLUTION.

There has been a spirit of turbulence alive at Milan this week, which for a day or two put that city in a serious state of alarm. The Monk PANTALEO, the friend of Gen. GARIBALDI, mounted the stump and harangued the people against France, the war, and in favor of the universal Republic. Before the excitement ended, several gun-shops were broken into and the arms distributed, and there were many discharges into the innocent air—not as the blood of the half-brainless disturbers of the public peace. According to the latest report, order once more reigns in that city. ANGELICO.

Close of the Session of Parliament—How the War is Regarded in Italy—Departure of the French Troops from Rome—The Fenelia—Maritime Exposition at Naples.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Monday, Aug. 1, 1870.

Yesterday Parliament brought its labors to a close, and the members who have tried to be faithful to public duty are now at liberty to give attention to other affairs. Not one-half of the whole number of Deputies have for some time been in their places. The session has been long and tiresome; many idle and some violent words have been used; but much good work has also been done. The Ministry has not been weakened by attacks, and now stands better both with the Parliament and the nation than it did at first. The good result is that the position of Italy is now more clearly defined than for a long time before.

MILITARY PREPARATIONS AND THE WAR.

The Government has ordered another division of about 20,000 men of those on unlimited leave of absence to join the army. This will make altogether an increase of 100,000 men, which will raise the effective force of the army so well nigh 500,000. There is considerable activity in the War Department, and the resolution has been taken to prepare the country for any emergency. The public mind is reconciling itself to the possible contingency of the nation being called upon to fight on the side of France. No one now believes in a short and spiteful campaign, like those of 1859 and 1866.

All eyes are turned toward the North, and ears are listening to catch the first rumor of the clash of arms. The Belgian scheme has caused the same amount of discussion here as elsewhere, but no one is greatly surprised, for the project is an old one, and has been in one form or another so long under discussion that it has become familiar to the public mind. Few have doubted, or now doubt, that the small States of the North will disappear if either France or Prussia, or both, are allowed to have their way. The affected innocence of these parties of the flock of the wolf when he makes an apology to the lion for seizing his prey. One is as guilty as the other, and the war of admonition and defense now going on is writing, indeed, no one, but only serves to divert public attention while waiting for the real settlement with arms. The issues are vast, and, perhaps, involve a settlement of the balance of power in Europe. If all the petty States are erased from the catalogue of independent sovereignties, it will leave Europe—with the Austrian and Russian Empires—out of the account—divided into four great nationalities, governed by as many powerful chiefs.

ABANDONMENT OF THE POPE.

At last the French are leaving the Pontifical territory. Whether they will go to the last man, and shot one bearing with him the French flag, is what we do not yet know. France needs every one of her soldiers to carry on the tremendous war in which she has pledged all her forces. The Pope will once more be left to shift for himself, and if the Italian Government is true to its promises—which nobody can doubt, as disregarding its word may direct affairs—Pius IX. will be safe from the attacks of filibustering bands. It is said that the stay of Christ's Vicar, in his exile himself, is a good deal disorganized on account of the uneasy state of feeling among officers and men of Germany and other northern origin, caused by the war, of which their countries are the theatre. The Roman Court has all along protested against the possibility of such a step being taken by France, as the abandonment of its territory, and it may yet in back up with fear, mingled with a good deal of anxiety. But all in vain; for France will first take care of its own immediate and paramount interests. We shall watch with attention the progress of events, and wait to see what may transpire at Rome.

The organs of clerical opinion denounce the Imperial Government with great violence for this abandonment of the Holy Father to the tender mercies of his Italian fellow-countrymen. The Emperor is taunted with his assumed title of "oldest son of the Church," charged with perfidy, and menaced with the judgments of heaven. But if such punishments of individuals or society are ever successfully invoked, Rome itself, at this moment, may be taken as a proof of their efficacy. You already know the action of Austria, suspending the publication of the infallibility dogma, a course which will be followed by other Catholic States.

THE JESUITS.

Yesterday the Jesuits and their friends celebrated the fête of St. Ignatio Loyola, the founder of their order. As we all know, this order has done more good and more evil to Catholic society than any other of the religious organizations, or all of them combined. Founded at the time when the unity of the Church was torn asunder by the Reformation, the society of Jesus, by extraordinary activity and heroic zeal, succeeded in doing much to restore the shattered fortunes of the Roman establishment. Just now, at Rome, we have witnessed its last newest act in leading by the nose the Pope to the very brink of the abyss of ruin. The mischief which the Jesuits have done by mixing in political affairs has caused them to be banished from most Catholic countries, in which Sovereign and Parliament are determined to keep the ecclesiastical subordinate to the civil power. A distinguished historian, in speaking of the compactness of this organization, and its absolute devotion to its primary aim of getting control over the minds of men, says: "There is not in the annals of mankind an example of such a perfect despotism, exercised not over monks shut up in the cells of a convent, but over men dispersed among all the nations of the earth."

THE NAPLES EXPOSITION.

The Maritime Exposition at Naples, upon which such great calculations have been made, is likely to be put off until the Spring on account of the war. If this should be determined upon it will give those in the United States who wish to be exhibitors a longer term during which articles may be forwarded. The show will not be so limited in its range as the name adopted would indicate. The first object is to bring together inventions of every kind connected with naval interests, but the list of articles represents almost every department of industry. ANGELICO.

SPANISH AFFAIRS.

A Council of Ministers—Another Force to be Sent to Cuba—Astonishment at the Decision—The Duc de Grammont's Explanation—The Cortes—Amnesty—Ministerial Indecision—The War—Finances—American Purchasers of Wine and Corn.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Monday, Aug. 1, 1870.

Feeling certain that I shall have very little news to send you by next Wednesday's post, I write to you today to make you acquainted with the decision arrived at by the council of Ministers, which lasted from 4 o'clock until 7 M. After a very lengthened discussion, it was decided that each Minister should remain at his post. M. RIVERO, after having heard the earnest entreaty of M. SERRANO, addressed to all the Ministers to the effect that they would remain united at so critical a time for Spain, and when the different parties were striving for the mastery, declared that he would remain at the head of the Ministry of the Interior. And his colleagues followed his example.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR CUBA.

It was also decided, in accordance with the request of Gen. CABALLERO DE RODAS, expressed in a telegraphic dispatch, to send a reinforcement of fifteen thousand men to the Island of Cuba, and this was done, no doubt, to substantiate the repeated declarations of the Minister of the Colonies, who announced to the Cortes that the insurgents of Cuba had been subdued, and that there only remained a few who wandered about the island for the sake of plunder. This decision has greatly startled the political circles here, who had taken as serious the declarations of M. MORET, the Minister of the Colonies. They now find that it was only a deception, and that insurrection in Cuba is still powerful.

GOVERNMENT'S AMENDE HONORABLE.

The Ministers, presided over by the Regent, have examined at length the dispatch sent by M. OLOZAGA, giving an account of his interview with M. DE GRAMMONT. When he pointed out to him how painfully hurt the Spanish diplomacy had been on reading the circular of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the views he therein expressed of what he calls the equivocal conduct of the Spanish Government and the Cortes, M. OLOZAGA having given a positive assurance that the Duke DE GRAMMONT had no intention of wounding the feelings of the Government or the Spanish nation, the Ministers considered this explanation sufficient, and thereupon the sitting broke up. I can assure you that the semi-official journals have received an order not to make comments on this question, and the order will be marked out.

NO EXTRA SESSION OF THE CORTES.

They also discussed at the council the question of convoking the Cortes for a short session of few days. In spite of the forcible demand of all parties hostile to the Government it was decided that the Deputies should remain in their homes, and be only convoked in the event of the struggle that is taking place on the banks of the Rhine compelling Spain to break through the strict neutrality she desires to observe. The permanent commission of the Cortes will this evening receive the explanations of the Government on this head. It is very probable its decision will be in accordance with the wishes of the Ministers, and that the Deputies will remain in vacation until the 1st of November next.

AMNESTY.

The Council also examined the question of the general amnesty, about which the semi-official journals made so much talk, and which Gen. PRIM promised to the deputation of Republicans who waited upon him to solicit it. Considering that the Carlists and Republicans are vying with each other in organizing themselves for an attack upon the Cortes and Government, should they attempt to place on the throne a Prussian Prince or Moyl candidate; that conspiracies are being formed in Madrid by the adherents of the Ministerial Friends of Prim and his colleagues; in the face of all this the nine members of Spain have indecisively postponed a measure that would open the door of hope to all the enemies of the present Ministry. One of the political men of Spain, who took the most active part in the revolution of September, never failed to write in the journals and state in the Cortes that an amnesty proves the moral force of him who grants it, and, at the same time, gives evidence of the greatness of soul necessary for him who wields the destinies of a great nation. That man is the Minister of the Interior; it is he who now opposes with all his might the amnesty. Formerly M. RIVERO was a Republican, but he is now a monarchist, and, moreover, has entirely forgotten the liberal programme he supported for eighteen consecutive years.

CRITICISM OF THE MINISTRY.

You will readily understand that the Ministers have had, in consequence of this easy-going and negative policy, to endure some rough attacks. The financial position of the country is also being severely criticised, and the Ministry, over which Gen. PRIM presides, will not gain out of these delicate attacks. In order to prevent a political shipwreck it is necessary to talk as long as possible, and put off skilfully important questions, as do not is to be urged to a moral defeat in the Cortes. This is the only thought of our Ministers. Instead of deciding, they postpone; and the habit of putting off to the third day the solution of important questions causes Spanish politics to be kept in the beaten track, and in arrear of events that are passing outside of Spain.

STATE AFFAIRS THIS MORNING.

For some days past the Republicans have advised the Government not to wait until victory has given to one or other of the combatants on the banks of the Rhine, the right of interfering with the affairs of Spain, and placing upon the throne a candidate of their own choosing, and they advise adjournment not to wait until events shall have caused violence to be done to Spain. The General seems a deaf ear to it. Right or wrong, he is waiting for the success of Prussia, as it is that case he would be kiss freely and without any fear of opposition on the part of France, to get Prince LEOPOLD of Hohenzollern, elected King of Spain. This is a bad calculation and it explains the inactivity of the Central. But it may be greatly deceived by it, for Spain is resolutely opposed to the election of the grandson of King MURAT, whose name recalls very painful recollections.

FINANCES.

The Treasury have not yet paid the bills drawn by it on the Receivers General of the Provinces, which have been protested and which are in the hands of certain bankers. The Spanish funds exhibit a downward tendency. I must inform you that the Treasury have disposed of a great part of the estates, (called crown estates,) and that the purchasers have for the most part paid for them in Treasury bonds, which had been bought at fifty-one per cent. That is to say, that a national property worth 100,000 francs has been sold for 51,000 francs, and as payment was only required to be made in nine years' time, the Treasury have made a reduction of twenty-two per cent on the 51,000 francs as a compensation for the interest on the sums paid in advance, and of course the purchaser gets the benefit. In short, a property valued in Spain at $1,000 is sold by the Treasury at $1,020 exactly; for the bonds are taken at their full value in payment of property belonging to the nation. At the Stock Exchange of Madrid, which is regulated by the London and Paris quotations, very little business is transacted, for the great bankers and rich speculators are in the Pyrenees or at Biarritz, where they will remain until the end of August or the middle of September.

AMERICAN PURCHASERS.

American merchants have been making large purchases of corn and wine in Spain. It is a good speculation at the present time, for the scarcity of money in Andalusia, Castile and Catalonia has considerably lowered the price of wines. Foreigners can again export salt from Spain.

The Convocation of the Cortes—A Note From the American Government on Cuban Affairs—The Brigands Again at Work.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Wednesday, Aug. 3, 1870.

After having appeased the public mind, and averted the Ministerial crisis, which was being prepared, the Regent returned to La Granja where he will receive the Chinese Ambassadors, who have just arrived here. Before leaving, the Regent made an announcement that he would return every week to Madrid to preside at a Council of Ministers. The Permanent Commission of the Cortes has appointed a sub-commission, charged with the task of reporting on the petition for the convocation of the Deputies, which was presented to M. ROSELLA, as President of that body. In accordance with the wishes of Gen. PRIM and the Ministers, the sub-Commission has decided that there are not sufficient motives for a special convocation of the Deputies.

GEN. SICKLES AND THE CUBANS.

Our Ambassador, Gen. SICKLES, has presented to the Spanish Government a diplomatic note which he has received from Washington, and in which our Government complains of the non-fulfillment by the authorities of Cuba of the treaties existing between Spain and the United States. The note above mentioned begins by protesting against the arbitrary conduct of the authorities of Cuba, who forcibly seize the persons and properties of certain North Americans, and in a manner not at all in conformity with the rights of individuals and international treaties. It also protests against the inhumanity of the Spanish proceedings, and adds that the United States Government can only view with regret the interference of the Spanish authorities with the rights of individuals by preventing the American proprietors from selling or transferring to whom they please the estates they possess, and the Washington Cabinet complains that the seventh article of the treaty of 1795 is completely ignored, since the Spanish Government has seized the property of Americans whenever it has thought fit. Our Government also protests energetically against the illegal arrest of certain American subjects.

CLAIMS OF AMERICANS.

The claims of Americans have hitherto been received by the Spanish Plenipotentiary Minister at Washington, but the Government at Madrid, finding that the above-mentioned Minister was more liberal than it wished him to be in the matter of the indemnities granted to Americans, has thought it advisable not to allow Señor ROSAS to settle them in future, but to investigate all such claims itself, so as to be able to subject them to all the annoyances and delays of Spanish red-tapeism. The Minister of Foreign Affairs has persuaded Gen. SICKLES that he will examine carefully the merits of these claims and give them ample and speedy satisfaction. It is allowable for those who are acquainted with the good faith which guides the acts of the Spanish Government to believe that the American citizens who have been deprived of their property and liberty by the authorities of Cuba will receive no indemnity, unless our Government shows itself determined to break through the system of delays which the Spanish Government never fails to bring to bear against claims of a similar nature. I will take great care to keep you well informed on this matter, in which a great many families of the United States are deeply implicated, and let you know the decision of the Spanish Cabinet in reference thereto.

THE SPANISH POLICY.

Spanish policy is falling again into a state of apathy. Every one is much occupied with the great struggle that is taking place on the banks of the Rhine, and calculates at his ease what the probable consequences of the success of this or that Power would be to Spain. The Spanish Ministers have not listened to the advice of those who wished them to be beforehand with the probable events of the war between France and Prussia, by deciding at once upon a form of government, either by proclaiming the Republic or elevating a Prussian Prince or Moyl candidate; that conspiracies are being formed in Madrid by the adherents of the Ministerial friends of Prim and his colleagues; in the face of all this the nine members of Spain have indecisively postponed a measure that would open the door of hope to all the enemies of the present Ministry. One of the political men of Spain, who took the most active part in the revolution of September, never failed to write in the journals and state in the Cortes that an amnesty proves the moral force of him who grants it, and, at the same time, gives evidence of the greatness of soul necessary for him who wields the destinies of a great nation. That man is the Minister of the Interior; it is he who now opposes with all his might the amnesty. Formerly M. RIVERO was a Republican, but he is now a monarchist, and, moreover, has entirely forgotten the liberal programme he supported for eighteen consecutive years.

CRITICISM OF THE MINISTRY.

You will readily understand that the Ministers have had, in consequence of this easy-going and negative policy, to endure some rough attacks. The financial position of the country is also being severely criticised, and the Ministry, over which Gen. PRIM presides, will not gain out of these delicate attacks. In order to prevent a political shipwreck it is necessary to talk as long as possible, and put off skilfully important questions, as do not is to be urged to a moral defeat in the Cortes. This is the only thought of our Ministers. Instead of deciding, they postpone; and the habit of putting off to the third day the solution of important questions causes Spanish politics to be kept in the beaten track, and in arrear of events that are passing outside of Spain.

STATE AFFAIRS THIS MORNING.

For some days past the Republicans have advised the Government not to wait until victory has given to one or other of the combatants on the banks of the Rhine, the right of interfering with the affairs of Spain, and placing upon the throne a candidate of their own choosing, and they advise adjournment not to wait until events shall have caused violence to be done to Spain. The General seems a deaf ear to it. Right or wrong, he is waiting for the success of Prussia, as it is that case he would be kiss freely and without any fear of opposition on the part of France, to get Prince LEOPOLD of Hohenzollern, elected King of Spain. This is a bad calculation and it explains the inactivity of the Central. But it may be greatly deceived by it, for Spain is resolutely opposed to the election of the grandson of King MURAT, whose name recalls very painful recollections.

FINANCES.

The Treasury have not yet paid the bills drawn by it on the Receivers General of the Provinces, which have been protested and which are in the hands of certain bankers. The Spanish funds exhibit a downward tendency. I must inform you that the Treasury have disposed of a great part of the estates, (called crown estates,) and that the purchasers have for the most part paid for them in Treasury bonds, which had been bought at fifty-one per cent. That is to say, that a national property worth 100,000 francs has been sold for 51,000 francs, and as payment was only required to be made in nine years' time, the Treasury have made a reduction of twenty-two per cent on the 51,000 francs as a compensation for the interest on the sums paid in advance, and of course the purchaser gets the benefit. In short, a property valued in Spain at $1,000 is sold by the Treasury at $1,020 exactly; for the bonds are taken at their full value in payment of property belonging to the nation. At the Stock Exchange of Madrid, which is regulated by the London and Paris quotations, very little business is transacted, for the great bankers and rich speculators are in the Pyrenees or at Biarritz, where they will remain until the end of August or the middle of September.

AMERICAN PURCHASERS.

American merchants have been making large purchases of corn and wine in Spain. It is a good speculation at the present time, for the scarcity of money in Andalusia, Castile and Catalonia has considerably lowered the price of wines. Foreigners can again export salt from Spain.

The Convocation of the Cortes—A Note From the American Government on Cuban Affairs—The Brigands Again at Work.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Wednesday, Aug. 3, 1870.

After having appeased the public mind, and averted the Ministerial crisis, which was being prepared, the Regent returned to La Granja where he will receive the Chinese Ambassadors, who have just arrived here. Before leaving, the Regent made an announcement that he would return every week to Madrid to preside at a Council of Ministers. The Permanent Commission of the Cortes has appointed a sub-commission, charged with the task of reporting on the petition for the convocation of the Deputies, which was presented to M. ROSELLA, as President of that body. In accordance with the wishes of Gen. PRIM and the Ministers, the sub-Commission has decided that there are not sufficient motives for a special convocation of the Deputies.

GEN. SICKLES AND THE CUBANS.

Our Ambassador, Gen. SICKLES, has presented to the Spanish Government a diplomatic note which he has received from Washington, and in which our Government complains of the non-fulfillment by the authorities of Cuba of the treaties existing between Spain and the United States. The note above mentioned begins by protesting against the arbitrary conduct of the authorities of Cuba, who forcibly seize the persons and properties of certain North Americans, and in a manner not at all in conformity with the rights of individuals and international treaties. It also protests against the inhumanity of the Spanish proceedings, and adds that the United States Government can only view with regret the interference of the Spanish authorities with the rights of individuals by preventing the American proprietors from selling or transferring to whom they please the estates they possess, and the Washington Cabinet complains that the seventh article of the treaty of 1795 is completely ignored, since the Spanish Government has seized the property of Americans whenever it has thought fit. Our Government also protests energetically against the illegal arrest of certain American subjects.

CLAIMS OF AMERICANS.

The claims of Americans have hitherto been received by the Spanish Plenipotentiary Minister at Washington, but the Government at Madrid, finding that the above-mentioned Minister was more liberal than it wished him to be in the matter of the indemnities granted to Americans, has thought it advisable not to allow Señor ROSAS to settle them in future, but to investigate all such claims itself, so as to be able to subject them to all the annoyances and delays of Spanish red-tapeism. The Minister of Foreign Affairs has persuaded Gen. SICKLES that he will examine carefully the merits of these claims and give them ample and speedy satisfaction. It is allowable for those who are acquainted with the good faith which guides the acts of the Spanish Government to believe that the American citizens who have been deprived of their property and liberty by the authorities of Cuba will receive no indemnity, unless our Government shows itself determined to break through the system of delays which the Spanish Government never fails to bring to bear against claims of a similar nature. I will take great care to keep you well informed on this matter, in which a great many families of the United States are deeply implicated, and let you know the decision of the Spanish Cabinet in reference thereto.

THE SPANISH POLICY.

Spanish policy is falling again into a state of apathy. Every one is much occupied with the great struggle that is taking place on the banks of the Rhine, and calculates at his ease what the probable consequences of the success of this or that Power would be to Spain. The Spanish Ministers have not listened to the advice of those who wished them to be beforehand with the probable events of the war between France and Prussia, by deciding at once upon a form of government, either by proclaiming the Republic or elevating

DEPARTURE to the [illegible] will see later that they will regret [illegible] done so.

REPLIES TO REPUBLICANS.

The Republicans do not much say [illegible] from Rhine. Prim, the last [illegible] may be able to turn to account, if the position that shall prove vacillation on the banks of the Rhine. They do not conceal the fact that the probable result of peace being made between the two Powers now contending would be to expose Spain to have a royal candidate placed upon the throne by the conquering nation, and to be exposed to a protectorate, all parties are waiting for this moment in order to oppose him by every possible means, and to the last extremity. The latest news I have heard is that there have been disturbances in several provinces with regard to the collection of the taxes. The Police wished to intimidate, but the peasants resisted them with stones and fire-arms. The Police in turn fired upon the people, and there were several killed and wounded. The Carlists being in the majority in the little town of Cerbera, in the Province of Valentia, suddenly rallied a quarrel with the Liberals. From insulting language they came to blows, firing upon each other with revolvers. The result was that three were killed and several wounded.

THE RUMORS.

The Government had strong evidence for a said to be made to the words of the Exchange of La Mancha, in order to get hold of the bandits who are striking terror into the country. Among the persons seized and carried off by the bandits, there is said to have been the son of Gen. RIVERA, whom they murdered, although his family had given $3,000 as his ransom.

PAPAL INFALLIBILITY.

Views of Father Hyacinthe—Full Text of His Letter on the Subject.

The following is Father HYACINTHE's letter on the Infallibility Dogma, which was first published in the Journal des Débats of the 16 inst.:

"A very serious question is now presented to all Catholics. Ought they to adhere to the definition of the infallibility of the Pope, or are they free to withhold their submission to it? Without doubt authority is the very character of our Church and the principle which forms our faith; but for that very reason it is important that we should distinguish between an arbitrary and a real authority, between a blind and a reasoning and reasoning submission. Before the Ecumenical Council the question may, therefore, be thus stated: Is the authority of the Council of the Vatican lawful or, in other words, does the present Council possess the essential characteristics of an Ecumenical Council? The first of these characters is liberty. Now, notwithstanding the secrecy in which it has been sought to envelop the internal working of the Council, it is easy to see by the nature of the dogma of which the Gospel speaks, which possesses an affinity with darkness, and which avoid the light from fear of being judged of the publicity open day, light has already been cast upon it, and will be with more vivacity against concerning it. The Ecumenical Council of Trent, illustrious for representing the most important and most enlightened portions of Catholicity, we know, as it also their accent latter, as was free and respectful in which, while maintaining their negative votes, they have stipulated their regrets for retired from the Ultramontanists that decided. The second characteristic is the absence of dignity. I may even say of serious consideration, with which the high interests of the faith have been treated by a majority which would not have been tolerated in the ancient councils, both on account of its factitious and illusory composition and its unfeeling oppression. Another condition, not less important than the ordinary of an Council is that it should be recognized as such by the Church. The Council, in fact, had no mission to impose new beliefs upon the faithful, but to maintain, and it needful to define, the ancient creeds. The Bishops are, above all others, witnesses of the traditional and historic faith of their respective Churches and of the Universal Church; and their votes, as judges, limited in advance by the very nature of this testimony, can only be pronounced upon truths which have been accepted from the beginning, everywhere and always, as revealed—good sense, good always good as creeds. If, then, they should happen to overstep their powers, the Church would not recognize the faith in the arbitrary decisions which they had published, and the Council would remain without authority. Such cases are not unexampled, and to cite only one history has recorded the names of SELEUCIAS and RIMINI, and the almost universal defection under which to use the words of St. JEROME the world groaned and was astonished to find itself Arian. The danger is not lost at the present time, and if one of the most important members of the Council (Monsignor KEBBEKOV) is to be believed, the Church has never known so great a peril. At such times it behooves even the humblest of Christians to uplift his voice in defense of his faith and the faith of all. For myself I feel myself inwardly constrained to be faithful to the, and as the prophet said, to cutem dolorem dum, abscondit. I protest, therefore, against the pretended dogma of the Pope's infallibility, as it is contained in the decree of the Council of Rome. It is because I am a Catholic, and wish to remain such, that I protest against the blows upon the faith of the faithful a doctrine unknown in all ecclesiastical antiquity, which is disputed even now by numerous and eminent theologians, and which implies not a regular development, but a radical change in the constitution of the Church, and in the immutable rule of its faith. It is because I am a priest, and wish to remain such, that I protest with all my soul against these almost Divine attributes to a man who is presented to our faith—I was about to say to our worship, as uniting in his person both the domination which is opposed to the spirit of the Gospel of which he is the minister, and to the infallibility which is reproached to the clay from which, like us, he is formed. One of the most illustrious predecessors of Pius IX., St. GREGORY the Great, reported as a sign of anti-Christ the title of Universal Bishop which was offered to him. What would he have said to the title of Infallible Pontiff? On the 27th of September of last year I wrote: the Council is now concerning the Council then about to assemble: "If apprehensions, which I do not wish to share, should be realized—if the august assembly should have no more liberty in its deliberations than it has had in its preparations—if, in one word, it should be deprived of the essential character of an Ecumenical Council, I would call upon God and upon men to summon one really summoned by the Holy Ghost, not in a party spirit—one representing really the Universal Church, and not the silence of some and the oppression of others." I again utter that cry of grief for a truly free and Ecumenical Council. And above all, now as always, I appeal to God. Man has been powerless to produce the triumph of truth and justice. May God arise and take His cause in hand and decide it. The Council, which should have been a work of light and peace, has deepened the darkness and unchained discord and sowed the malignant word. We replied to it as a terrible echo the social world. War is one of God's scourges, but in inflicting a chastisement may it also prepare a remedy. In sweeping away the ancient edifice may it not prepare the ground upon which the Divine spouse of the Church shall construct the new Jerusalem!" PIERRE HYACINTHE.

The Archbishop of Canterbury on Ritualism—The Bigoted—It is an Evil.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has addressed a letter to the Chairman of the Portsmouth branch of the Church Association, in answer to a memorial forwarded to him, signed by upward of 2,000 lay and clerical members of the United Church of England and Ireland. The memorialists complain of the adoption, by a party within the Church, of doctrines and practices alien to the purity of the reformed faith, and express their "indignant sorrow and surprise at the supineness and apathy that have prevailed for so long a period on the part of their ecclesiastical rulers." The Primate writes under date of Aug. 2:

"I am not surprised that many members of the Church of England should feel indignant at practices and doctrines which have in some places sprung up during the last twenty years, having a manifest tendency to assimilate the worship and teaching of our pure, Scriptural and Reformed Church to the system of the Church of Rome. But I cannot in any way agree with you in the belief that this evil is owing to supineness and apathy on the part of the Bishops. You must be well aware that the beneficed clergy of the Church of England are not, like the priests of some portions of the Church of Rome, dependent for their position on the arbitrary will of their Bishops, but, like some Dissenting ministers, liable to be removed by a vote of their congregations, or of the heads of their community. I, for my part, whatever disadvantages may follow from this freedom of the clergy, rejoice that it is secured to them, and that no clergyman of the Church of England can be removed until he has had a fair and open trial before a competent tribunal, in which his violation of the law of the Church has been legally proved. I agree with what I presume is your wish, that the points at issue might, as the Ritual Commission has suggested, be decided in some less expensive and more expeditious manner, and I have always expressed my readiness to assist in improving our legislation in this direction. But I cannot attribute blame to those who, while the Legislature has shown no disposition to intrust the Bishops with great authority, have thought it their duty, however much their patience has been tried, to act according to law, and not to seek some arbitrary mode of arresting those whose opinions they disapprove. The power is not conferred upon them either by the Church or the law of the land. In the midst of the anxieties of political life, and in the rancor of a political contest, it will be a matter of rejoicing to the friends of the Church if the Church, by giving a promise that the marriage shall take place in two years.

A young man, named POWERS, recently attempted to murder a girl named ANNIE RAYBOURNE, at Louisville, Ky., to revenge his brother's murder. About six months ago, the brother was murdered by a man named MORTON, from motives of jealousy, both men having been favored with the friendship of the same young girl. It is said that the girl RAYBOURNE held POWERS while he was being murdered by MORTON, and it was owing to that circumstance that the attempt was made to kill her.

Free Trade.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Aug. 18, 1870.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I read your editorial of today on "Free Trade Run Mad" with surprise. You merely mistake the "sore spots." There are Congressmen of Republicans who have become tired of Congressional interference with trade (with the "interchange of commodities") under the guise of "protecting" it. Blundering Congressmen know little about the wants of the various trades. There is a growing and overwhelming belief that more independence should be allowed to those who trade or trade as they believe their best interests require. They are the best judges. I am a Republican, and a daily reader of the TIMES and Tribune. I have no interest in importing or manufacturing. There are certain "eternal laws" which our high tariffs have rudely violated. The Republican Party has been wrong, and must come down; it will simply become, from constant contact with "the people," I know your editorial of today misapprehends the public pulse in a matter of the utmost importance. Thousands of Republicans will vote for no more Congressmen who are in favor of sky-high tariffs. The Republican platform in Connecticut last year hit the happy medium. Yours, truly,

W. H. WILSON.

[We have no objection to the "happy medium"—it is the extreme measure of sacrificing the Republican Party to please ultra Free Traders against which we protest.]

The Steam-Boat Inspection Service.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I noticed, in your paper of Friday last, a communication from "An Engineer," in regard to the subject of making steamers on our Western waters as safe as those used on our Eastern waters, who has so far as he goes, stated the case in a far better shape than I have ever seen it presented in a daily newspaper. Your correspondent does not fully present the case in all its bearings, which, with your permission, I think I can set forth in better and more perfect shape. In this connection it is only proper to make and show comparisons between steamers navigating Eastern rivers and those used in the West. For steamers used on the Eastern rivers, selecting the best type of them, such as the Mary Powell, the Daniel Drew, the Oswego, Hudson, the Belle, and Providence, there can be no question that they are the swiftest, most economical in fuel, and the safest boats used in this country. These steamers use engines of large size, in proportion to the bulk to be moved through the water, and are run at a low pressure of steam comparatively, using from thirty to thirty-five pounds only, having condensers, either of the "jet" or "surface" pattern, (the latter being deemed the best by all practical engineers.) They also use a paddle-wheel of certain given proportions, which gives a maximum of speed for a minimum expenditure of fuel. When these steamers are running in the waters they are generally employed in, and which is nearly or practically fresh and pure, the use of the condensers named proves of great benefit, particularly so the "surface condenser," which checks all the objects of the "jet condenser," with equal efficiency, in making a vacuum, and a greater saving by the water being kept practically pure in the boilers, and also, by the lessened amount of power required to operate them.

They further secure a great benefit by the means used to make them the best type of "compound engine" that can be devised, which is now getting to be the favorite style of engine on the Western waters, the whole operation of the "compound engine" being comprised in one cylinder, instead of two, which is effected by cutting off the steam, in the single cylinder, at a point less than one-half the stroke of the engine, and allowing the balance of the stroke to be made by the expansion of the steam within the cylinder, during which period of time there is no steam from the boiler used in the cylinder. As compared with this type of engine, those used on the Western waters differ in several important (and in some respects vital) points. They use comparatively small cylinders, and attempt to make up the deficiency by the use of a pressure of steam four or five times greater than that mentioned as used in the East. They also use paddle-wheels of a much larger percentage of diameter, and length and depth of buckets. They use in their boilers the impure (though fresh) waters of the rivers, which is found in practice to be one of the chief causes of explosions that are noted in that region, when added to the excessive pressure of steam used by them, and which also involves the use of a greater amount of fuel to produce a given amount of power, than is required for an Eastern steamer.

This type of engine, however, if made properly, with increased diameter of cylinder, and diminished diameter of paddle-wheel, (but with the same face and dip of bucket,) so as to get higher speed on the piston of the cylinder, and using a less pressure of steam, cutting off the same at the nearest possible point to get the greatest benefit of the expansion, and the application of a "surface condenser," to not only make a vacuum in the cylinder, but also to restore the water used back to the boilers practically pure, would produce the greatest effect in the matter of economy of fuel, durability of boilers and engines, and the safety of life and property.

It may be argued that the cost of these alterations and attachments would increase the cost of the steamer. Granting this so be the fact, the saving in fuel, the safety of the vessel, and the extended durability of the same, would very soon pay the cost of the extra expense, and the saving of weight would be even less, than before, all things considered. The life of a steamer on the Western waters is calculated at five years, as they are at present constructed. The life of a steamer running on our Eastern waters is not much less than twenty years, and there are many running today which have performed good service for a far longer period than that even. Taking the whole matter into consideration, I think there can be no doubt that a properly-constructed steamer, on the Western waters, can be made as safe, as economical in fact, and as durable as any built for use in the East.

Emigration to Virginia—Letter to Gov. Walker.

The Richmond State Journal of the 15th inst. says:

Gov. WALKER recently received from Wales, from the agent of a number of Welshmen, a letter making inquiries as to the quality of land in Virginia, its price, and the prospects for success of a colony of his countrymen, should they immigrate hither, as they proposed to do. To the State agent of the Board of Immigration, Gen. WILLIAM E. BUCHANNON, will doubtless be assigned the duty of answering properly the inquiries made in the letter. Gen. TOCHMAN, European agent of the Virginia State Board of Immigration, has succeeded in inducing a considerable

DEPARTMENT OF DOCKS.

No New Piers to be Built Until a Uniform Plan is Adopted—Heavy Rents to be Collected by the Controller—Piers Obstructions to be Removed Forthwith—Street Manure Not to be Dumped on the Piers.

The Commissioners of Docks met at 2 o'clock P. M. yesterday, President AGNEW was in the chair, all the Commissioners being present.

Commissioner HENRY informed the Board that work was in progress on all the piers ordered to be put in repair.

Commissioner HYAT, from the Executive Committee, made the following reports:

Adversely on the petition of FECK & WALWORTH, to be allowed to occupy, at their own expense, a pier at the foot of East Forty-eighth-street. The Commissioners give as a reason for their action that it is considerable to adopt a plan to be constructed until a uniform plan is adopted prescribing how the work shall be done, and of what material it shall be made.

On the petition of H. P. FARRINGTON to have the slip foot of Hammond-street and those foot of East Twenty-second-street North River, dredged. The Commissioners recommend that the Dock Superintendent of the district pass upon the report when tendering is required, at the Hammond-street pier, and that as to the slips adjoining West Twenty-second-street, the prayer of petitioners be denied.

The Commissioners reported favorably on the petitions of STEVENS & CO. to have wooden pier No. 1 East River.

Adversely on petition of OGDEN HOFFMAN to have dredging done along the bulkhead between Rivington and Stanton streets, East River.

All the above reports were adopted.

Commissioner WOOD, from the Auditing Committee, reported in favor of paying several bills for advertising, amounting in all to $[illegible]. The report was adopted.

A communication was received from Dock Superintendent JOHN RICHARDSON, reporting favorably on the petition of certain parties to lay a drain-pipe from No. 318 West-street to the North River. The permission was granted, the work to be done under the direction of the Superintendent.

Upon the report sent in to the Board the complaint of Mr. H. COOK and others, of No. 6 Dutchess-street, North River, the Commissioners reported that the insufficiency of drainage which they found existed was caused, was a matter for the attention of the Board of Public Works, and not for this Board. They cannot, therefore, recommend that it make the application for removal of the nuisance to that Department. The report was ordered on file, and the Secretary was directed to inform the Mayor of the Board's action in the premises.

A communication was received from RICHARD O'GORMAN, Counsel to the Corporation, in whom was referred the question of opinion of the Board whether this Board or the City Comptroller should collect the rents accruing from ferry leases. Mr. O'GORMAN says that the law creating the Department of Docks gave to that Department the sole control over the wharves, piers and slips of the City, together with the right to collect and pay into the Sinking Fund all rents accruing from the same. He says it is a superfluous or gratuitous assumption of opinions, but that the use of the ferry slips is in the nature of a franchise held from the City, and that the rents for such franchise are not in the nature of an appurtenance or easement to the piers, and that the City Comptroller is the proper officer from the control of the Board. He is of opinion, therefore, that the collection of such rents belongs properly to the Controller of the City, and not to the Department of Docks.

Mr. AGNEW remarked that the collection of these rents by the Department of Docks would save to the City from 15 to 15 per cent now charged for that work; but as the corporation Counsel was the legal adviser of the Board, he supposed they must be bound by his decision.

The communication was ordered on file.

A communication was received from RUSSELL SUTHERS, asking the Board to take measures for removing obstructions in the streets between Nos. 12 and 16 North River, and also that the river along the line of the bulkhead between Piers Nos. 12 and 14 be dredged.

Referred to the Executive Committee.

A communication from RUSSELL SUTHERS, stating his willingness to supply at cheap rate yellow pine for bulkheads, was received and referred to be placed on file.

Communication from OLIVER BRYAN, asking the Board to compel the removal of a board fence adjoining his river property, foot of One Hundred and Fourteenth and One Hundred and Fifteenth streets; also of an obstruction, gates and fences in the river in front thereof, by JERMIAH BONANZY and others, who have set up a fictitious claim to the water right in that locality. The communication was referred to Dock Superintendent FINLEY to examine and report thereon.

Messrs. WM. H. ARMSTRONG & CO. petitioned to be allowed to keep on Pier No. 40 East River two boilers now stored there, as they do not interfere with the commercial traffic of the pier.

Commissioner HENRY moved that the prayer of the petitioners be denied, and that they be notified to remove the boilers from the pier forthwith. In support of his motion Mr. HENRY said that the Board had passed a resolution for the removal of all obstructions from the piers, and if special exception were made in the case the Board would be flooded with petitions similar to this, so that their order would be practically nullity. He thought it well to begin now to effect these removals.

Commissioner WOOD suggested that by the action proposed the Board was beginning at the wrong end. He, too, believed in keeping the piers unobstructed, but in this particular case there was no objection offered by any one as to a hindrance of commercial traffic. In the lower Harbor the City of the Dead, with its obstructions on the piers, and in the portage, too, where commercial traffic was greatest, no attempt had been made to keep the piers free for the uses of commerce. He moved to amend Commissioner HENRY's motion by a resolution to the effect that the Dock Superintendent be requested to inform it how it may report that all permanent obstructions to the City piers must be removed on or before Sept. 15, after which date the penalties provided by law for allowing such obstructions to remain would be collected. Derricks, warehouses, sheds, &c., were now obstructing the piers in Superintendent DOWNES's district, and he thought the time had arrived for a change in such things. He wished to encourage commerce, and the removal of these was an imperative necessity.

Commissioner HENRY replied that the Superintendents, acting under the orders of the Board, were now notifying all those interested that such obstructions must be removed. He wanted the work done forthwith, and could see no good likely to accrue from extending the time to Sept. 15.

The question on Commissioner WOOD's amendment was taken and lost. The motion of Commissioner HENRY, that the application of A. MCMASTER & CO. be denied, was then put and carried.

Commissioner HENRY then offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Dock Superintendents be and are hereby instructed to notify all persons having permanent obstructions on the wharves and piers of this City, to remove the same forthwith, except those otherwise ordered by this Board.

Commissioner AGNEW presented the petition of merchants and residents in the vicinity of Piers Nos. 30 and 31 East River, praying that the Board rescind the street-cleaning contractors to use those piers any longer as places for depositing street-cleaning in the vicinity, which, they say, was highly detrimental to the public health.

In connection with this subject, Commissioner WOOD called up the communication received from the street-cleaning contractors, in July last, and tabled on his motion, asking for a few days' delay on the part of the Board, and proposing that the deposits of dirt should be specially removed. Weeks had passed since that communication was presented to the Board, he said, but no removal of the dirt had been effected. In order to bring to a determination the question whether the contractors had a legal right so to use these piers, as that a nuisance is created and the public health endangered, he offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That all cleaning of streets and sewers encroaching any of the piers of this City be in future prohibited, as detrimental to the public health, and that it be referred to the Executive Committee to ascertain and report to this Board by next quarterly meeting whether any of the street-cleaning contractors have had and are now using Piers Nos. 30 and No. 31, East River, for this purpose.

The resolution was adopted.

Commissioner WOOD also offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That no bill presented to this Board be paid until it has been examined and pronounced correct by the Dock Superintendent.

Mr. WALSH, from the Harlem Gas Company, appeared before the Board, and asked, on behalf of the Company, permission to drive a row of piles along the bulkhead between One Hundred and Eleventh and One Hundred and Twelfth streets, in the Harlem River, so as to enable vessels to lay and unload there in a protected manner, as the slope of the bank of the river renders the same now inconvenient for them to do so. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee, with power.

A communication was received from the Engineer-in-Chief of the Department (Gen. GEORGE B. MCCLELLAN) transmitting bills of G. & W. BURT for surveying instruments for the use of the Department—as all BURT and certifying that the same are correct.

Commissioner WOOD moved that the resolution just adopted, as to bills being certified to by the Auditing Committee, be suspended so far as the instrument bills are concerned, and that the bills of Messrs. BURT be ordered to be paid.

The motion was carried, and the Board then adjourned.

Presbyterian Reunion at Southold, L. I.

—Second Day.

At the Presbyterian reunion at Southold, L. I., yesterday, the Committee on the Five Million Memorial Fund, through its Chairman, Rev. W. G. BARNES, of Sag Harbor, reported a plan for the Presbytery's accomplishment of its part of the work of raising the memorial fund. The report was discussed and unanimously adopted. It requires a sermon on the subject by each pastor on the first Sabbath of October, a subsequent presentation by means of an exchange of pulpits, and then a series of popular meetings to be addressed by eloquent ministers and laymen at central points of the island, the whole to be followed by a personal contribution by all the Presbyterian population, including the children of the Sunday-schools. Committees were appointed to supervise the missionary, educational and publishing departments of the Presbytery's work.

Arrangements were also made for putting candidates for the ministry, and committees were appointed to examine applicants for ordination in regard to their proficiency in the arts and sciences, the Biblical languages and literature, especially Hebrew and Greek; also Logic and History, and the polity and the formulas of the Church. In the evening a full and popular missionary meeting was held.

The principal speakers were Rev. E. H. SAYER, of India, who gave a clear, impressive and graphic description of the history, race and characteristics of the people of Hindoostan, India, with a sketch of their pantheistic theology and wonderful worship. [illegible] Rev. Dr. STURGIS, formerly of the Omaha Mission, took part in the proceedings, and eloquent addresses were made by Rev. W. H. LAMPLUGH, of Islamkot, on the incidents and proper results of Christian intercourse, the missionary and evangelistic activities and the Church. The closing address was a vigorous and stirring appeal by Rev. Dr. WILLIAM P. STRICKLAND.

The music, as on the previous evening, was under the direction of Prof. D. P. HOSMER, of Brooklyn.

The Rev. [illegible] of the church, Rev. [illegible] WILLIAMS, presided, and introduced the speakers. The Presbytery adjourned to meet with the Synod of Long Island, at Huntington, on the 17th of October.

COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION.

The Irish Arrivals—Improving Salvation—The Labor Bureau—Statistics.

The regular meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration was held yesterday afternoon, at Castle Garden. Present, all the members, and Mr. O'GORMAN presiding.

A letter was received from L. R. WELLS, Superintendent of Ward's Island, explaining a matter to which his attention had been called by the President. It appeared that Mr. WELLS went to Wallack's Theatre on one occasion, recently, and found there the inmates of the Lunatic Asylum, E. EMMETT, that he addressed that gentleman a private note which commended his performance highly. A portion of the note was made use of by Mr. EMMETT, who posted it upon his bills. Mr. O'GORMAN took exception to it, and addressed Mr. WELLS the letter to which the above explanation is a reply. The matter was referred to the Ward's Island Committee.

A resolution was adopted that all contracts be referred to the Counsel of the Board, before being signed, and approved as to form.

The Building Committee was requested to report at the next meeting the amount of liability incurred for the construction of the Lunatic Asylum, and at what periods payments would be expected. This was done in order that the expenses of the Commission might be curtailed, in view of the large decrease in immigration during the year.

Mr. STACK, from the Building Committee, reported that the plan called for an expenditure of $200,000, to which $60,000 had been added, but the work would be done for less than $200,000. A detailed report would be submitted at the next meeting.

Mr. SHOOK protested against the contract for the sea-wall, which had been passed while he was absent.

Mr. FERAR claimed that the contract had been awarded in good committee, and stated that he was under the impression that Mr. SHOOK was present when it was passed.

Mr. FERAR moved that the salary of JOHN DWYER, Assistant Surgeon at Ward's Island, be increased to $1,000, from $[illegible].

Mr. WALLACH objected, as at this time immigration was falling off, and the Board should curtail instead of increasing salaries. Besides, if this increase was allowed to Dr. DWYER, the other physicians would want an increase also.

After some discussion, in which it was stated that Dr. CARNOCHAN, who was surgeon, had visited the Island about ten times a year, at an average cost each visit of about $[illegible], the resolution to increase the salary of Dr. DWYER was carried.

The Finance Committee reported that the receipts since Aug. 4 were $17,042 97; disbursements on county bills, $6,[illegible] 47; on sundry other bills, $12,418 34; on Lunatic Asylum, $4,000, making a total of $22,[illegible] 81. Balance on hand yesterday, $[illegible]. The receipts during the same period last year, $24,610.

Some bills for the support of paupers in Westchester County, amounting to $6,000, were referred to Senator Riverside for examination.

A resolution was adopted directing the Superintendent of the Labor Bureau to govern himself accordingly in the exercise of his duties. A amended rule was adopted requiring all applicants for servants to be introduced to the Superintendent as proper persons to employ help from the institution. In the course of the debate attention was called to the fact that a stranger was an immigrant girl. Mr. WALLACH said that he would not. He was sure to make the rule too strict, as, if they did, applicants for help would be driven away. Besides, the instances cited were but one out of some fifty thousand, and in the case even the enforcement of the most stringent rules would not have prevented the outrage, for the man was well known in the community where he lived, and if it had been required, he could have obtained any number of references.

The report of the counsel, on all the differences between the Commissioners and the Broadway banks, in relation to the deposits, was presented. Counsel holds that the President of the bank agreed to pay interest at the rate of four per cent, on balances, but it is doubtful if the bank can be held, as the President had no right to make such a contract on behalf of the bank. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee with power.

Mr. FRANK WEBER was appointed to visit the various counties where pauper immigrants are supported and report on their condition.

The statistics of the commission show the following from: Number of passengers arrived to Aug. 14, 455,494; number arrived since to Aug. 15, 1,[illegible]; total, 1,[illegible]; to same date last year, 178,[illegible]. Passengers arrived, to date mentioned, of which have not been received, 1,207, making a total of arrivals, 455,[illegible]. Balance in bank Jan. 1, $[illegible]; receipts to Aug. 4, $390,997 03; received since to Aug. 15, $17,[illegible]; total, $[illegible]; disbursements to Aug. 4, $434,[illegible]; expenses to date, $[illegible]; total, 454,[illegible]. Balance in bank, $[illegible].

Supposed Murder in East Newark.

An evening or two since two vagrants and one woman were seen around East Newark, the men apparently under the influence of liquor and quarreling with the woman. Since that evening the men have been frequently seen together, but the woman has not been seen. A young man named WATERSONNE states that on the evening in question, near midnight, he saw two men, carrying what looked like a long bundle of clothing between them, come to the bridge over the Hackensack and throw it into the stream. It is supposed that the woman was murdered.

THURSDAY, Aug. 18—P. M.

The War bulletins from Paris and Berlin were so contradictory today that the Street was at great loss to make up an opinion as to the true situation. Some of the Paris telegrams were so positive in favor of French successes, about noon, that the buyers of Gold paid 1⅛@1 ⅞ cent. advance on the lowest figures of the morning, that is 111⅞ ⅞ cent. against 110⅞@111 ⅞ cent., but there was not sufficient confidence in this direction as to induce large or earnest purchases of Gold for a further rise. The Export and Customs demands continue quite large, as against only a million a week sold out of the Treasury, but these demands are met by sellers of Gold, on the calculation that we have seen the worst of the Continental War, and any approach to peace will bring down the price of Gold to 110@110⅛ ⅞ cent., from which point the market started up, early in July, on the first mutterings of the War storm. [illegible]

In the Foreign Exchanges, today, the feeling was firmer for 60 days Bills on London, on account of the reduction of the rate of Interest at the Bank of England from 6 ⅞ cent. to 4½ ⅞ cent. ⅞ annum. The rates for 60 days are 109⅞@109⅞; for sight Bills, 110⅞@[illegible]; the latter weather clear for Wednesday's steamer. The Extra Gold for Future Delivery cost $287,000 in Gold, today.

The demand for Money has improved in the last day or two. The Brokers are paying 5 ⅞ cent. on call loan as the rule of the Street, and in some instances on Miscellaneous collateral, 6 ⅞ cent. was paid today. Time contracts for Money, 30@60 days, are made at 7 ⅞ cent. to avoid the contingency of a sudden advance of the rate on call by the 1st or 15th September. It is possible that these preparations may postpone any decided change in the market to a later period in the Fall season.

The Public Funds opened with increased firmness this morning, and the offerings of Bonds at the early Board of the Stock Exchange, as on yesterday, appeared to be limited; but to the surprise of the Street, nearly five millions were offered to the Sinking Fund, as the Treasury Office stated, the greater part by gold speculators dealers as COOKE, FISK, VERMILYE and others. Out of these offers $1,000,000 were accepted, as in the list below:

NEWS OF THE DAY

THE WAR.

In regard to the recent battles about Metz, we learn from our special dispatches that the fighting began on Sunday, near that city, at 4 P. M., and was brought about by a Prussian attack on FRONSARD'S Division, which was about withdrawing from its position. The attacking force was under command of Prince FREDERICK CHARLES and Gen. STEINMETZ. No particular results followed, the French continuing the retreat in an orderly manner. Marshal BAZAINE was slightly wounded, and had a horse killed under him. The French loss in this fight was 3,000 and the German 10,000, the disproportion was owing to the destruction caused by the mitrailleuse. The fight at Gravelotte, where NAPOLEON had established his head-quarters, began on Monday evening. And here also the slaughter was terrible, in fact in all the accounts received from various sources heavy losses are admitted on both sides. A dispatch from Berlin states that another great battle took place on Tuesday morning, and claims a victory. BAZAINE was attacked while endeavoring to fall back from Metz to Verdun. The combat lasted twelve hours. A number of prominent German officers were killed. King WILLIAM, on Wednesday, visited the troops on the battle-field. French accounts of the situation are vague, although a dispatch from Paris states that BAZAINE claims that the Prussians have been repulsed along the entire line. Gen. FROSSARD is reported to have been grievously wounded in one of the battles. The Prince Royal of Prussia, it is also reported, has been slightly wounded. The rumored refusal of NAPOLEON to grant an armistice, it is said in Paris, is confirmed. The reports of the movements by the way of London are similar to those received from Berlin, and engagements continuing through Monday and Tuesday are reported. An official dispatch, received in Paris from BAZAINE, yesterday, claims a great victory over Prince FREDERICK CHARLES and Gen. STEINMETZ on Tuesday, at a point between Doncourt and Vionville. A London dispatch, evidently referring to the same affair, and fixing the battle near Mars la Tour, states that the Prussians have been thrown back upon the Moselle. BAZAINE has again prohibited all private telegraphing, as in this way his movements become known in Berlin by the way of London. The Paris Patrie, in an article reviewing the situation, based on information from the front up to Tuesday, says BAZAINE was not surprised, as had been said, and that having four times repulsed a German attack, he continues his march, and is certain to make a junction with the corps of MCMAHON and TROCHU. He will then, it is added, be at the head of a stronger force than the one opposed to him. The French Government represent that the reverses have been fully checked. The investment of Strasbourg by the Prussians is said to be so slack that the garrison has been reinforced by French troops. A naval engagement off the coast of the Island of Rugen, in the Baltic, is reported. The affair occurred on Wednesday afternoon, a division of the Prussian fleet encountering the French fleet. The former soon withdrew without loss. The French squadron is now at Dornbusch. Eleven German vessels have been captured since the beginning of the war.

Great activity is shown in Paris in the defensive measures now in progress. By to-morrow 1,000 guns will be in position. Gen. MILLIERE has been assigned to the command of the Guards Mobile. The destruction of all railways and bridges leading to the city is urged. OLLIVIER and his wife, it is said, have gone to Italy, and the movement is much commented on. Prince NAPOLEON has sent his children and valuables to Italy, in opposition to the advice of the Empress. Prince BONAPARTE is said to have gone to Corsica. Considerable excitement is occasioned at the capital by the rumored presence of Prussian spies. The last session of the Corps Legislatif was an interesting one. Count PALIKAO stated that although he could not state the result of the recent engagements, he would say that an unsuccessful attempt had been made to take Pfalzbourg, and that the Prussians had been repulsed with a loss of 1,800 killed. This result had, he added, an inspiriting effect upon the army. The Deputies declined to sit yesterday, but the Senate was in session. Gen. TROCHU has been appointed commander-in-chief of all the forces of Paris, and has issued a proclamation to the people counseling calmness and moderation. The theatres of Paris are nearly all closed. Minister WIMPFFEN is overwhelmed with business in consequence of assuming the protection of Prussian citizens. A movement to present Marshal MCMAHON with a sword of honor is in progress in Paris, and a large amount of money has already been subscribed.

The London Times calls for aid for the wounded of both nations now at war. Cambridge University has subscribed generously for this purpose. The London News says, English hopes of succeeding in intervention have been given up. A son of VICTOR HUGO has been refused a passport for Paris by the French Ambassador at Brussels. Several celebrations of French victories have taken place in Ireland. A better tone pervades the markets of Liverpool and Antwerp. The Prussian war loan as again reported a failure. Gen. SHERMAN has arrived at the head-quarters of the King of Prussia, and has been received as a royal guest. Prussia, it is said, as a result of the war, will exact no surrender of French soil, but will insist upon the exclusion of the BONAPARTE family from the throne of France. Daily See Berlin Press correspondent is allowed at the front with the German troops. The Duke of BRUNSWICK has issued a manifesto urging all Germans to aid Prussia. The Paris Press continues bitterly on the neutral position of America.

At the afternoon session of the Labor Convention at Cincinnati, on Wednesday, the committee report on TRUMBULL'S address was adopted and new resolutions were presented relating to a variety of subjects. At yesterday's session, a resolution to form an independent party, to be known as the "Labor Reform Party," was offered and debated at considerable length without action. The Committee on Resolutions reported a series setting forth that labor is suffering from a monetary system established during the war; that the rate of interest is disproportioned to and in excess of the national wealth; that "greenbacks" are not full legal tender and should be withdrawn; that the five-twenties, the principal of which is legally payable in lawful money, should not be paid in gold; that the tariff should admit the necessaries of life, and other features held to be obnoxious to the interests of laboring men.

Prospects of the War.

The events which have taken place this week around Metz are only to be compared with the fighting and slaughter which occurred in the battles of the Wilderness. On whichever side the balance of advantage may be deemed to rest, it is observable that Prussia makes no boasts, and that the losses have unquestionably been terrific on both sides. It would probably be far within the bounds to estimate that sixty thousand men have been killed or wounded since Sunday morning. The brunt of the loss has fallen upon the Prussians, since the French were much protected by the artillery of the adjacent fortresses. It is stated that in the first three days of the week the Germans lost 20,000. Our special correspondent says that on Sunday alone they lost 10,000 men. It is admitted that their attempt to take Pfalzbourg was unsuccessful, whereas at Pont-a-Mousson they gained a decided victory. Chalons is to be the next scene of carnage, and there, it appears, the German commanders will have a fresh army to encounter.

While much uncertainty hangs round the military operations, there is less obscurity connected with some very important political events. The King of Prussia has practically annexed Lorraine and Alsace. This has brought out the Times, of London, with a statement that the annexation would "violate the sacred principles of national sovereignty, and conflict with a permanent restoration of peace." It looks as though England was taking the alarm. The sympathies of that country have hitherto been more decidedly with Prussia than even American sympathies, for there the well-wishers to the French are confined to Ireland. But a rapid series of Prussian successes have led the English people to ask what King WILLIAM, or rather Count BISMARCK, means to take as the great prize of the war? If it be true, as is reported, that the Emperor NAPOLEON has signified his willingness to treat for peace, and that the King of Prussia has rejected his overtures, this feeling of misgiving in England will be deepened. But was it to be supposed that Germany would ever be willing to give up this war without exacting some kind of indemnity or compensation? The Times told us only a little while ago that Alsace and Lorraine belonged of right to Prussia. To her, at any rate, they will go, unless a few miracles are performed on behalf of the French. Can England prevent it? What use would her mites of armies be in the field against the German hosts? It is rather too late now to dream of arresting the progress of this colossal Power. Whatever Prussia may choose to exact she must have, so far as England's power to prevent it is concerned. The penalty of extensive aggrandisements might be a European coalition against her, such as the world saw arrayed against France at the beginning of this century. But we believe that united Germany could and would hold her own even against such a combination. The chiefs of the House of HOHENZOLLERN, in the sixth century, "hardly ranked with the Electors of Saxony and Bavaria." Now that House can safely play the part of Dictator in Europe, while England could only stand aside and look on.

There is, however, hard and bloody work to be done before Prussia will have time to rearrange the map of Europe. The French may be crushed, but they will die hard. If the exclusion of the BONAPARTE family from the throne of France were the only condition of peace which Count BISMARCK exacted, the French people might not hesitate long about accepting it. But there is, at least, one other, which would most assuredly be demanded—and that is, the payment by France of the expenses of the war. That was one of the conditions on which Prussia made peace with Austria in 1866. The French people could scarcely be expected to regard with equanimity a proposal to make them pay for the rod with which they had been scourged. Consequently, NAPOLEON is only a pawn in the game. Move him off the board altogether, and there is very little gained or lost on either side. This is a conflict of nations, not of rulers. Some people in Europe say, "presently a decisive battle will occur, and then the neutral Powers can step in and make peace." The neutral Powers are far more likely to be drawn into the war themselves. Even if peace should be effected with France, that would only be the beginning of the end. Every Power in Europe would be jealous of Prussia. A wise moderation on the part of her rulers will alone enable her to go her way in peace.

The French retreat to Chalons was decided upon before the fighting began on Sunday, since it was quite obvious, as we pointed out the other day, that the tactics of Prussia at Josephstadt and Königgrätz were about to be renewed. Metz would be masked, and, as we said on Wednesday, the principal invading force could pursue its march upon Paris. Marshal BAZAINE was prepared for this plan, and hence he withdrew his troops from its fortifications. All the fighting this week has been intended, on the part of the Prussians, to drive him back into Metz, or destroy him altogether. Avalanches of men have been rolled down upon him, but it is stated that he will be able to pursue his original intention, and effect a junction with the forces of the other commanders. The Prussian plan is so far interfered with that they will not be able to shut up BAZAINE in Metz, and it was of very great importance to them that they should succeed in doing this. How far they will be able to intercept his retreat to Chalons we shall not venture to predict.

A First-Class Mission Going Begging.

The muddle which has been made over the recall of Mr. MOTLEY would be absurd if there were not also something thoroughly deplorable about it. Mr. MOTLEY can scarcely be fulfilling his duties at present with a very cheerful mind. It is impossible to recall a man, as he was recalled, without subjecting him to some degree of humiliation. The least that can be done afterward is to allow the person thus treated to quit his post as soon as possible. At present, Mr. MOTLEY occupies a most disagreeable position. The Cabinet to which he is accredited knows that he has no longer the confidence of his own Government, and, consequently, it would be very awkward to hold any serious communication with him, no matter what crisis might arise—and we live in times when startling events may happen at any moment. Complications may occur which would render it extremely desirable that we should have at the Court of St. James a Minister in every way qualified to represent the views of the Government and the people. Yet, at so critical a period, the Mission is practically vacant, and the President seems to be at a loss to know how to fill it up.

There is an originality, we will not say an eccentricity, about the way in which Gen. GRANT makes and revokes appointments which it would sometimes puzzle all the wise heads in the nation to explain. Amid much that is unintelligible, the only certain thing is that when the President has made up his mind there is no possibility of changing it. Instances of this characteristic will at once occur to every reader, but we think it will be admitted that in regard to a post so important as the English Mission a little more care than usual should have been exercised in providing for the future. Before recalling Mr. MOTLEY, his successor should have been found. The position was offered to Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, and everybody has been wondering why he has been so many weeks hesitating whether he should accept it or not. The World takes him to task with some severity for his indecision. But it appears from a letter written to the President, on the 27th of July, by the gentleman himself, that he lost no time in positively declining the post. When his nomination was only a rumor—namely, on the 14th of July—Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN telegraphed word to the President that he could not go to England. He repeated that telegram on the 15th. But the President had decided for him, and the nomination went to the Senate. Then Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN reconsidered the question, as it was very proper he should do, and the result was that he adhered to his original resolution to decline diplomatic honors—such as they are. Once more he made known his views to the President, and after all this it will perhaps strike him as rather hard that he should be ordered up for punishment by the World.

Well, then, what is to be done? No doubt the President could easily find a name or two from among his friends who would not throw away this opportunity of gaining distinction. Perhaps it would be well to select a competent man for the post; but we make that suggestion with becoming deference. It is quite certain that the Mission should not be left much longer in its present state. Mr. MOTLEY must be anxious to be relieved from a post which he has not filled to the President's satisfaction. Mr. MORAN is an experienced and safe man, but it is not well to leave everything to the Secretary. Who will take this English Mission? It is being hawked about at present in a manner which does not add much to its dignity. We trust the President has some one in his eye, and it would be well to take care that this "some one" will be ready to turn himself into a diplomatist if he is asked.

The Democracy and the Approaching Campaign.

The Democratic State Convention will be held at Rochester, shortly after the Republican Convention to be held at Saratoga on the 7th of September, probably not later than the 20th. Our opponents have for many years carefully managed to call their Conventions at a later date than ours, evidently calculating upon taking advantage of any blunders we might be supposed to have made, either in nominations or the construction of a platform. In the present canvass there is rather less sense in such a course than usual, for Democrats seem to have made up their minds about their nominations.

For several months past it has been growing more and more evident that Gov. HOFFMAN would be renominated. He is a popular leader, not only among the rank and file of the Democratic party, but also with the managers, and is therefore sure of the nomination. But whether he can be elected, even though the rest of his ticket is successful, depends upon the temper of the Democratic factions, especially in this City. A bitter feeling of hatred has been engendered here toward Gov. HOFFMAN, which may show itself in open hostility at any time.

There is no question that Tammany will rule in the approaching Convention, nor that Gov. HOFFMAN will be its choice. There are whisperings of intended division, however, to be heard in the Democratic camp, which may or may not be well founded. It is said that a defection can be easily organized in this City and the river counties, which would surely overcome any majority Gov. HOFFMAN would otherwise be likely to get. There is very little probability that so bold an expedient will be adopted, even to serve the ancient grudges of MOZART. The party has always been keenly susceptible to the "cohesive power of public plunder," and at a time like the present the managers will be pretty sure to conciliate the disaffected, at least temporarily, by a judicious use of this influence.

Mr. HOFFMAN'S nomination being already assured, Lieut.-Gov. BRAGG, Controller NICHOLS and Commissioner FAY and CHAPMAN will, in all probability, be also renominated. As for the issues to be put forward in the platform, the leaders are inclined to act with great caution, feeling that a slight mistake might involve them in a disaster similar to the one which overtook them in 1868. Hence they seem inclined to avoid any positive declaration of policy. The Canal issue has thus far been steadily avoided, and even the World's sensible proposal to accept the results of reconstruction—negro and all—and boldly grapple with "live issues," is received with distrust. It is regarded as a proposition which may do more harm than good to the party in this State. The large Irish vote is to be conciliated. The Irishman and the negro do not fraternize, and it would be a bitter pill to the former to ask him to accept the World's proposed new creed. The danger of forcing so radical a change of policy upon the Democratic Party, is enhanced by the fact that the German vote has just been attracted by recent events in Europe to the Republican Party, and also by the prejudices of old Democrats. They are of the kind that are always boasting that they are "original Andrew Jackson Democrats," and they seem to have a Bourbon tenacity of ideas concerning such innovations as the World proposes. We apprehend, therefore, that the approaching Democratic State Convention will content itself with a very moderate and innocent expression of policy, and that the managers will depend more upon Republican apathy than upon new measures, to enable them to achieve success in the coming canvass.

Third-Party Movements.

The din of preparation for the Fall campaign has once more awakened the one-idea enthusiasts. They are unchanged and unchangeable. Firmly persuaded that they alone are right, they would mold existing political organizations to serve their special purpose; or, failing in that, they would originate independent parties. The Labor Convention, in session at Cincinnati, has under consideration a project for the formation of a political party that shall be consecrated to "labor reform," whatever that may be, and to a variety of questions which the managers of the movement have succeeded in tacking to it. A party organized under these auspices would be more radical than the ordinary Radicals; it would start with the hypothesis that labor is the slave of capital, and that the emancipation of the former involves a general crusade against many privileges of the latter. The ultra temperance men are a little farther advanced in their programme. While the Labor Convention thinks about setting up a party on its own account, the prohibitionists have begun to act. In this State and in Massachusetts they have set in motion an Anti-Dram-shop Party, and have nominated candidates to give effect to their policy. In both instances they have constructed an entire ticket—that of Massachusetts having no less renowned an agitator than WENDELL PHILLIPS at its head. He is relied upon to unite the labor interest with the prohibitory interest, and will probably unite the vote of a State rich in intolerant eccentricities better than any other man. Something of the same sort may also be tried for at Michigan; and the National Standard, the journal to introduce the law of the old Anti-Slavery Standard, predicts that the example will be followed in other States.

Why? "Because neither of the existing parties will attempt to do the work deemed essential by conscientious Temperance voters,"—is the answer of the National Standard. The labor reformers would give the same response, only adapting it to their special interest. They imitate "conscientious Temperance voters" and assail what they are unable to control. Now, we have no quarrel with enthusiasts, whether prohibitionists or labor reformers. Both classes are probably of some use in concentrating attention upon subjects which offer little attraction to the ordinary politician. When, however, they undertake to set up distinct parties, they inflict injury upon the more advanced of the existing parties, and at the same time render little substantial service to the cause they are most anxious to promote. The anti-liquor men in this State, for example, may draw off enough Republicans straight in some localities to render the Democracy successful where otherwise they would be defeated; but this implies no benefit to the Anti-Dram-shop Party. They injure those who in other matters are identified with themselves, and yet do themselves no good. On the contrary, they make opponents of both the regular organizations. It is the same with the labor reformers. By constituting themselves a third or fourth party, they throw away an influence which might be beneficially exercised upon one or the other of the only two parties that can at present hope to wield legislative power, State or national.

If either the prohibitionists or labor reformers were wise, they would hold their strength irrespective, to profit by local opportunities in educating constituencies, and determining the choice between good and bad candidates. Of course, this will not satisfy those who spurn the notion of compromise where wine, or whisky, or beer is concerned. But it should decide the action of more reasonable men. What they cannot prohibit, they may succeed in regulating,—and surely this result is worth an effort by "conscientious Temperance voters." They have seen in this City the difference between the Republican administration of a Liquor law, and the administration of the law under Democratic direction, and the contrast is worth remembering on election-day. The labor reformers have before them a much broader task, and aspire to exercise influence in a much broader arena. Many of their views in regard to the public lands are, however, so just, that their growth in Congressional favor may be confidently predicated, provided the attempt to foster them be confined to the present party channels. Connect them with incipient agrarianism, and financial absurdities, as demagogues in the Cincinnati Convention propose, and the really sensible features of the movement will be buried under a heap of rubbish. If allowed to stand on their merits, with such aid as may be easily rendered through Republican or Democratic organizations, these features will some day be recognized at Washington. Make them the basis of an outside party organization, to be manipulated by wild theorists, or marketable tricksters, and reforms, in themselves not undesirable, will be delayed indefinitely. The zeal which thus outruns discretion is never politically profitable.

English Neutrality.

Naturally enough, both Prussia and France are dissatisfied with the course which is being pursued by British merchants under the Neutrality laws. Each declares that the other is the most favored, and both indulge in open denunciation. Prussia asserts that England practically allows her territory to become the French base of naval operations against the coasts of North Germany, by supplying French ships with coal. She also asserts that England is a magazine from which France can draw any amount of war material. France, on the other hand, complains that English merchants are supplying Prussia freely with everything she needs, and that both the English Government and people sympathize with that country to an extent which impairs their neutrality. Between the two, England is in a fair way to get the ill-will of both belligerents, just as she did in the rebellion in this country, and yet it is said by her Government that she is strictly fulfilling all the duties of a neutral under the law of nations.

The accepted rule now is that neutral ships may carry what they choose to either belligerent, (excepting "contraband of war," and to any port which is not blockaded. All goods are declared to be contraband which are specially required for war purposes, such as arms and ammunition, and even such goods may be supplied without offence, subject only to the risk of capture. Under these rules it will be readily seen that in case one of the belligerent Powers has a strong war marine, and the other a weak one, the former possesses a great advantage. This was the case with the North and South during our war, and it is the case now with France as against Prussia. France has a strong navy, and is able to keep a sharp watch, and almost entirely prevent the supply of contraband goods to Prussia, while there is no impediment to trade with France.

So long as the law remains as it is, a commercial people like the English will be pretty sure to take advantage of it, and the result will be that they will have the ill-will of the belligerent which suffers most, and very likely of both. Nations, like individuals, are sure to resent hostile interference when they are engaged in a contest, even though that interference may not be prompted by sympathy. English dealers supply the French fleet with coal, and send large numbers of horses to France, and Prussia very naturally complains, although it is clear that she does so upon insufficient legal grounds. Still the fact exists that a serious ill-feeling toward England prevails in Prussia, while England is lavishing all its sympathy and "moral support" upon Prussia.

Considerable discussion is taking place in England on this subject, and much regret is expressed that the cordial feeling between Prussia and Great Britain has been disturbed. The remedy which is proposed—and it seems to be the only one that can be applied—is to amend the existing Neutrality laws so as to prohibit the sale of contraband goods to belligerent Powers, and to define more fully what articles are contraband. It has also been suggested that the Queen be empowered, by order in Council, to prohibit, temporarily, the supply of such articles as are not strictly contraband, but which may become essential to a belligerent, as is the case with coal just at present.

It is argued that perfect neutrality is in the interests of humanity, inasmuch as it would tend to shorten wars, and that this consideration ought to be sufficient to overrule the objection that it would cripple commerce. Most wars would doubtless be brought to a speedier determination if the belligerents were confined strictly to their own resources; and in many instances we do not doubt that hostilities would be prevented by the general adoption of a policy of perfect neutrality. But aside from that consideration, we believe that in the long run, even as commercial a country as England would not lose by resolutely refusing trade with belligerents, and especially in contraband goods. The good will of other nations is of greater importance to that country than to almost any other, simply because it is so extensively engaged in commerce and manufacturing, and it can far better afford to forego temporary gains than to hazard the permanent loss of future trade.

But Great Britain ought to be controlled by a higher consideration than that of mere pecuniary interest. It should be impartial and fair, and so define the laws as that both belligerents may know what to rely upon. There should be no technical evasion, no quibbling, but an honest, straightforward neutrality, which would win the respect and preserve the good will of all nations which may be so unfortunate as to be involved in war. From the tone of the English Press upon this subject, we judge that the general feeling is in favor of such a policy, and the indications are that it will be adopted—perhaps not soon enough to prevent a misunderstanding with Prussia, but in time for any fresh hostilities which may occur.

Decadence of the Novelty.

Society in the West seems to be getting into a very chaotic condition. The fatal facility offered by Western laws for dissolving matrimonial alliances, not much exaggerated in the popular legend that on Indiana and Illinois railroads the trains stop five minutes for divorces, as they do in the East for refreshments, is bearing its natural fruit in a corresponding loosening of all domestic ties. The children of that gentleman whose variable taste led him, after four divorces, to return to his first love and remarry his original wife, can scarcely cherish a very lively affection for one another, or a very exalted respect for their fickle-minded parent. As little harmony can be looked for in that other Illinois household, whose master, after divorcing his wife, has engaged her to do housework for himself and her successor at the paltry pittance of $2 a week—a modern GRISELDA.

If this miserable domestic anarchy increases, as it seems to be increasing, we may prepare to bid adieu to all that is dearest and holiest in the Eden of home. The observances of affection which hedge around and sanctify the domestic fireside will come to be forgotten, or despised in a social order where one's nearest relatives change almost with every moon. The family circles will disappear, and society will resolve into a cold communism like that of ancient Sparta, or a sensual one like that of modern Oneida. Already one may see signs of this moral transition, not less in the independence of that young lady of Dubuque who has recently sued her mother for libel, than in the Roman virtue of that Ohio farmer who has caused the arrest of his daughter for stealing a horse. It is not necessary to go into such darker evidences of this domestic disintegration as the crime of that wretch, who, at Camden, a day or two since, signalized his emancipation from ordinary social superstitions by murdering his mother. In any condition of society, matricide, we are glad to believe, will be the rarest of exceptions. But all these things are straws; the breeze that blows them may presently swell to a tempest.

The Albany Evening Journal is so accustomed to conduct a campaign after the Chinese manner of fighting that we cannot marvel at its aversion to honest and discriminating criticism. It has so much faith in the efficacy of beating gongs and firing squibs and calling names, that it naturally objects to any other mode of warfare. It is indignant, therefore, because we suggested that the responsibilities of power will necessarily throw Republicans to some extent on the defensive, taking no note of the fact that this defense can be conducted successfully, and without impairing the ability of the party to institute, simultaneously, an aggressive policy. There is, too, this difference between us in regard to expression. The Journal proposes to abuse the Democracy. We propose to couple an exposure of the weakness of the Democratic position with an exposition of the course which Republicans intend to pursue with reference to questions in which the country has a substantial interest.

There is nothing, says a writer in the Opinion Nationale, so "moralizing" (used as the opposite of demoralizing) as a gonococcus, and from this, among other reasons, he deduces an argument for returning to the ancient practice of burying the dead. The connection of ideas may not be very obvious, but it will be better understood when we quote the following recommendation of arm burial: "It would tend to make the family, the eternal basis of society, a true sanctuary, for evil thoughts and domestic quarrels would, in most cases, disappear in presence of the sacred repository of ancestral ashes." The writer claims to have advocated the revival of the funeral pile since 1856, and during the period that has elapsed since then his doctrines seem to have extended even to this country, where, before the outbreak of the war, he states that several towns had thought of putting them in practice. He maintains that cremation of bodies on the battle-field is a great sanitary as well as moral necessity—inspiring, as it would, the danger of pestilence following in the train of war, and offering, as it might do, the means of restoring to surviving friends, in the form of "a small but sacred deposit of ashes," the remains of the fallen. These purposes, he thinks, would be effected by lighting up on the field of carnage, not a fire but "the purifying gas of the strongbible," whatever that may be.

Some of the leaders of the National Labor Congress still appear to cherish the idea that a distinct political party can be created in the interests of the working men. In spite of the proposed failures that in Massachusetts and elsewhere have attended the effort to carry an independent labor ticket, the New-England deputies have not lost faith in their favorite specific for the wrongs of the artisan. It is almost unnecessary to remark that nothing can be more foreign to the spirit of republican institutions than such efforts at mere class representation and legislation. Let it be admitted that capital is more than sufficiently powerful in our State and National Legislatures, it is none the less true that a special and sectional representation of labor would only tend to add a fresh abuse to that which the working man claims it already is exposed. The only intelligible platform for artisan voters is one that should seek to secure men capable of an honest, and intelligent appreciation of the wants of all classes of the people, since there are, strictly speaking, no questions which call for legislative treatment that can be viewed without prejudice from the interested stand-point of any single section of the community.

Our Police force is not what it should be in numbers or efficiency, and its detective department asks too much in concert with knaves and thieves to vindicate the law as often as it should be vindicated. But the general organization of the force has not hitherto been subjected to the base influences which the Cincinnati Commercial makes responsible for the impunity so often enjoyed by crime. The signs of political influences in the force have, perhaps, of late increased, and recent events have proved the necessity of adding to its strength. But the worst manifestations of the evil sketched by our Cincinnati contemporary are in the administration of justice in quarters where partisanship exerts its power. Of the Cincinnati Police, our contemporary says: "We have for our protection a Police force, officered mainly by men appointed at the instance of small politicians, for their serviceability at ward meetings, and for their influence among the newsies, from which class some of them have been selected." Such is the tendency of things where municipal government passes into the hands of a party which rules for support upon the ignorant, corrupt and vicious classes.

Reform in the management of the public lands appears prominently among the miscellaneous questions of the day. The President of the National Labor Convention, in his opening address, urged the adoption of a declaration against further grants of public lands, or their sale on any terms, except to actual settlers; and the proceedings of the body make certain the acceptance of this proposition. The Republicans of Iowa, in convention, at Des Moines, pledge themselves on the same subject. Without absolutely opposing land grants to railroads, they insist that in all cases ample provision shall be made against speculation or monopoly. The means suggested are "speedy sale at moderate prices, and their occupancy upon fair and liberal terms by any and all who desire to purchase and settle upon them." Iowa speaks from experience upon this subject. Few States have seen more of land grants in aid of railroads, and none has suffered more from the obstacles which speculation offers to settlement and prosperity.

In discussing the alarming tendency of the great railroad combinations recently effected in this country, the Evening Mail revives the old plan of building public railroads, and permitting the public to put trains upon them and run them at a toll barely sufficient to keep the roads in order. This, it is asserted, would most effectually put an end to the aggressions of the great railroad monopolists. Perhaps so; but it would also destroy all private railroad enterprise, and instead of preventing legislative corruption, would only turn it into new channels. "Rings" would be formed to control the expenditures for construction and management of the public roads, and the people would suffer even more than they do now. The fact is that so long as notoriously corrupt men find their way to our capitals as legislators, they will surely find ways and means to evade the most stringent laws which can be devised to protect the public interests.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Hoxie.

JOSEPH HOXIE, long known as a popular political speaker, as well as a successful business man in this City, died yesterday, at Westerly, R. I., at the age of seventy-five. He was born in Connecticut, and there he spent his early days, but at the age of twenty-five he set out to seek his fortune in the Metropolis. He began as a clerk in a dry-goods store, and by his industry and faithful attention to his duties, was in a few years enabled to set up in business for himself. He became very successful as a merchant, and by his genial manners made himself popular with all who knew him. During the HARRISON and VAN BUREN campaigns he made numerous political speeches, which were characterized by clear and straightforward argument, and a keen and lively wit, which always made him a favorite with his audience. Added to his intelligence and ready wit, he had the advantage of a fine voice and graceful manner, and was a natural vocalist of no mean order. ROBINSON, the man who was accused of murdering HELEN JEWETT, was a clerk in Mr. HOXIE'S employ at the time, and his employer took a zealous part in his defense on the trial. Mr. HOXIE retired from the dry-goods business some years ago and engaged in that of insurance, but latterly he had altogether given up the active duties both of mercantile and political life. In personal appearance, he was tall and of a commanding presence, with flowing white hair and a benignant countenance. He leaves many friends and admirers who sincerely mourn his loss.

Samuel V. Merrick.

SAMUEL V. MERRICK, a prominent citizen of Philadelphia, died at his home in that city yesterday, at the age of seventy. CANADA.

Ship-Canal from the St. Lawrence to Lake Champlain Proposed.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Aug. 18.—A meeting has been held here, attended by about forty leading capitalists of Massachusetts, New-Hampshire and Vermont, and by all the principal lumber men in this neighborhood, the object being to forward the construction of the Caughnawaga Ship-canal, to unite the waters of the St. Lawrence and Lake Champlain. It was stated that, the United States being the principal consumer of Canadian lumber, the construction of the canal would increase the value of the production of the Canadian forests, and it was claimed that as a financial measure it should recommend itself to capitalists. The Ottawa lumber trade last year exceeded 4,000,000,000 of feet, the transportation of which would be cheapened by $1 per thousand, compared with the present circuitous route.

WASHINGTON.

Dismissal of the Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Steam Engineering—A Curious Piece of Testimony—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Mr. W. H. ALLEN, for eight years chief Clerk of the Bureau of Steam Engineering in the Navy Department, has been dismissed. He has published a letter in which he alleges that his dismissal was procured by the Chief of the Bureau, J. W. KING, because he opposed the settlement of the Corliss contract for steam machinery in the manner in which it was made by KING, this opposition having finally resulted in an investigation by the Retrenchment Committee, and a provision in the Appropriation bill that Corliss should be paid upon his contract as much as might be found due him by a board to be convened by the Secretary for that purpose. Mr. ALLEN prints with his letter portions of the testimony taken before the Retrenchment Committee. In this testimony, concerning CORLISS' proposition for a settlement, Vice-Admiral POREER testified:

"I recommended then that this bill should not be paid until the Board made up their minds. Meantime the Secretary said to me: 'Admiral, there is something on that paper that compromises you with regard to his matter. This was accepted by the former Administration.' I told him not; that it was impossible. I could never have done anything to compromise myself in any way, and there was nothing on that paper which could compromise me. He said my name was on it, and that I would find it there authorizing these things. I told him it was no such thing. I knew better. I took the paper and found it this option on it "Accept the last proposition. D. D. P.," which is a forgery. Here is the paper. That is not my writing of my name. Then I wrote at the bottom of that, "The above use of my initials is a forgery, and a poor imitation of my name. D. D. PORTER, Vice-Admiral." I showed that to the Secretary, and said from that I should judge there was something wrong in this transaction. He said it looked rather bad. That first satisfied me that there was something wrong on the part of Mr. KING. This was done in Mr. KING's department, and he, because this paper resided in that department."

Further on, in relation to the same subject, he says:

"That paper is the Corliss proposition, and that forgery, for I do not call it anything else, is an attempt to use my name. It has been over and rubbed around, but everybody who knows my name knows that is not it, and that I cannot write that way. If I was going to approve that bill I should have put it in full, in such a way that there would be no misunderstanding, and what I mean to say is, that if anything is wrong about this, the chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering is the man who is responsible."

The Governor proposed to obey the writ today which had been heretofore issued by the Judge, and deliver up these prisoners before him in Chambers, some sixteen or eighteen of them arrived here this afternoon. Mysterious Poisoning Case—One Man Dead and Another Dying.

The Syracuse Journal of the 18th inst. says:

"On Friday evening last, MICHAEL HOWARD and MATTHEW WELCH, better known in Jamesville, N. Y., as 'MATTY' WELCH, were at CADOGAN'S Hotel, in the village. About 10 o'clock these two men started to go home. WELCH boarding at HOWARD'S house, and previous to going, took what is termed in that locality a 'night-cap,'—that is, a glass of whisky. The bar-tender, WILLIAM BROADUS, gave them tumblers and a decanter of whisky which was in the bar. Each drank a glass, and immediately after HOWARD complained of a burning sensation in his mouth, throat and stomach, and made the remark that he would give $10 if the whisky was out of him. WELCH coincided with HOWARD, and complained of the same burning sensation. They came back with HOWARD'S horse, and on arriving, immediately went to bed. HOWARD complained frequently during the night of burning sensations in his stomach, and passed a very restless night. WELCH rested easier, and both failed in the morning on arising. They proceeded to the railroad track, both being in the employ of the Binghamton Railroad Company, and working on that section, where they commenced work. About ½ 9 o'clock HOWARD was taken with retching and purging, and about half an hour after WELCH became similarly affected. They were both taken home, and Drs. KNAPP and JONES called to attend them. After an examination, the attending physicians concluded that both men were suffering from the effects of some corrosive poison, their conditions showing conclusively that both had taken the same drug. Every effort was made to relieve the sufferers, but HOWARD continued to grow worse, while WELCH, during the night, supposed to be having vomited freely. HOWARD continued to grow worse until Sunday morning, at 10 o'clock, when death put an end to his sufferings. WELCH continued to improve slightly until Tuesday noon, when he was removed on a bed to Pompey Hill, where his brothers reside. ROBERT WELCH, the bar-tender, says the two men drank from the same bottle as other customers; that he has no knowledge of any deleterious substance in either of their glasses; that he was on friendly terms with both the men, and never had been otherwise. BROADUS had been absent pursuant to arrangement prior to the affair, but is back again."

POLITICAL.

THE LABOR CONVENTION.

Discussion on the President's Address—Chinese Immigration—Resolutions Offered.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 18.—In the afternoon session of the Labor Congress, yesterday, Mr. MCGUIRE, of Missouri, submitted a minority report on the President's address, declaring for free homesteads to every American citizen, which he cannot be deprived of by his own act or by Congress; free money, or a sufficiency of the money taken and furnished by the Government, without the interposition of banks. The report was laid on the table.

THE MINORITY REPORT.

The question recurred on the adoption of the majority report. Mr. TROUT, of New-York, opposed that portion of the report recommending the printing of 20,000 copies of the President's address, until means are provided to pay for the work. He was also opposed to the portion of the report against Chinese immigration. The distinction between immigration and immigration must be clearly stated. Mr. LANE, of California, was in favor of the report, and against both the importation and immigration of Chinese. Mr. MCLEAN, of Boston, spoke against coolie immigration or importation. The Chinaman could never become a citizen of the United States, like other immigrants, from his very nature. He would remain a heathen in spite of all Christian influence upon him. The majority report on the President's address was then adopted.

RESOLUTIONS OFFERED.

Mrs. LANE, of Boston, submitted resolutions indorsing the action of the Labor Congress during the past year, demanding for toiling sisters the same rate of wages that members of this Congress receive, &c. The resolutions were unanimously adopted. Mr. FIELD, of Detroit, introduced resolutions declaring for United States legal-tender money; demanding immediate relief from all internal revenue taxation, save on whisky, which is to be increased one-fifth; asking for the repeal of duties on articles in common use not grown or manufactured here, &c. Mr. DAVIS, of Cincinnati, offered resolutions touching prison discipline, substituting schools of reform for houses of correction and refuge. Mr. BRADY, of Pennsylvania, offered a resolution asking for legislative protection in miners. Mr. DELANOY, of California, presented resolutions denouncing the coolie system, and asking for the abrogation of the treaty between the United States and China; also opposing taxation of tilled lands, and imposing taxation on all lands owned by monopolies and not cultivated. A number of other resolutions were offered which were generally referred to their appropriate committees. The President appointed a Committee on Public Lands to act in conjunction with the Committee on the Platform.

Thursday's Session—Suggestion for a Labor Reform Party Platform.

The Labor Congress met at 9 o'clock today. Mr. CAMERON, of Kansas, rose to a question of privilege, and proceeded to vindicate himself from the charges contained in the resolution of the Leavenworth meeting. Mr. CUMMINGS, of Massachusetts, offered a resolution recommending the formation of an independent political party, to be known as the National Labor Reform Party, for the protection, by the ballot, of the interests of the working people, and, for the appointment of a committee in each State to call a national convention to organize such party. Mr. CUMMINGS supported the resolution in a speech. Mr. WIRE, (colored,) of Pennsylvania, offered a proposition to organize an independent political party. The history of all reform movements in this country showed that the cause generally had gained no strength by political organizations. The Anti-Slavery organization had operated on public sentiment outside of politics. Mr. LAYNE, of Illinois, made an earnest speech in favor of Mr. CUMMINGS' resolution. He would admit that the Republicans had given away much land, but the same party had opened all the South to the laboring classes. Mr. TROUT, of New-York, said that experience had shown that the introduction of politics into trade unions had impaired their usefulness.

THE PLATFORM.

The Committee on Platform reported substantially as follows:

First—That laborers in all departments of useful industry are suffering from a system of monetary laws made during the war.

Second—That the rate of interest is disproportionate to and in excess of the prudent rate.

Third—The repeal of the national banking system is demanded.

Fourth—The present greenbacks that are not a full legal tender should be withdrawn, and a uniform legal tender of the credit of the nation, issued as a legal tender for all debts public and private, convertible into three per cent. bonds; also, convertible into money at the pleasure of the holder.

Fifth—The interest on the debt, payable in gold of the Five-twenty bonds, the principal of which is legally payable in lawful money.

Sixth—The burdens of the Government should bear equally on all classes. The exemption of bonds bearing extortionate rates of interest from taxation is in violation of the first principles of labor.

Seventh—The tariff should be modified to admit the necessaries of life and such articles of common use as we cannot produce; duties for revenue to be mainly laid on articles of luxury, and such articles as we have the material of in abundance, and so develop the resources of the country, increase the number of factories, give employment to more laborers, cause an migration of skilled labor, create a permanent home market for agricultural produce, destroy the necessity for a standing army, increase the revenue, and soon enable us to compete with the manufacturers of Europe.

Eighth—The public lands belong to the people, and should not be sold to individuals nor granted to corporations, but saved as a trust for the people, and granted free of cost to settlers, in amounts only of 160 acres.

Ninth—The treaty-making power has no authority in the Constitution to dispose of the public lands, without the joint sanction of the Senate and House of Representatives.

The report was signed by the Committee, PETER H. CLARK signed, but excepted to the paragraph relating to greenbacks.

DISCUSSION ON THE PLATFORM.

After the report of the Committee on Platform, Mr. DELANO, of California, offered a resolution, which he asked to have added to the platform, declaring that the presence of Chinese laborers in large numbers is an evil entailing want and crime on all classes of the American people, and should be prevented by law. The platform was taken up by sections.

Mr. COWEN spoke in opposition to the first resolution. He thought it hinted at repudiation. He offered a substitute, which was tabled by a vote of 45 to 18. After considerable confusion, the original resolution was adopted by an overwhelming majority. The resolution touching the rate of interest was taken up. Mr. FRYER, of Washington, took exception to the resolution as it stood. Mr. CONGDWELL, of Illinois, sustained the resolution in a speech. Pending discussion, a recess was taken till 2 P. M. Upon the assembling of the Congress in the afternoon, the resolution of Mr. CUMMINGS, of Massachusetts, came up. After a discussion of one hour on this question, the interest resolution of the platform was taken up. Mr. NORTON, of Missouri, offered a substitute, which was lost, and the original resolution was adopted. The resolution pertaining to national banks was then taken up. After debate the resolution was adopted, and the Convention adjourned.

Republican Office-Holders in Washington—A New Organization.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—The different Republican States Associations here, together with the Southern Republican Club, have united in an organization, with the Public Printer, A. M. CLAPP, of New-York, as President. Under the general direction of this organization, the State Associations represented propose themselves to take charge of the work of collecting and expending the contributions of their members for campaign purposes. At the meeting for perfecting the organization, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we heartily approve of the object of the National Republican Executive Committee in procuring funds with which to advance the welfare of the Republican cause throughout the country; but would suggest the policy of voluntary contributions in preference to a system of taxes, than a system of arbitrary assessments, that we hail with pleasure the name of political contributions; Commencing on this question, in continuity just, and that we hold it to be the sacred duty of each and every Republican holding position under the Federal Government, at the City of Washington, to contribute to the fund, equally according to his ability, of the means derived from those salaries which are sustained through party influence and power, as the support of the principles and party which sustains the Government, at the critical period; and further, that men holding these positions and refusing to contribute to support the party which gives them work, of party favor, and support, and their places should be promptly filled by other Republicans who will demonstrate their general respect for the party and principles by which they are profited in a more pecuniary and financial sense.

The Republican Party in Iowa—Platform Adopted as the Recent Convention.

The following platform was adopted at the Republican State Convention, held at Des Moines, Iowa, on the 17th inst.:

1. Resolved, That we refer with pride to the history of the Republican Party, and congratulate the people of the country upon its successful career. It gave to the people the Pacific Railroad; it has abolished slavery, given us the Pacific Railroad, established the doctrine of the right of expatriation, and maintained the Monroe doctrine by its firm and successful efforts in behalf of our nation. It has maintained the Monroe doctrine by compelling European Powers from interfering with the Government of this continent. To propagate it in power is the only safe guarantee for its continuity in the future.

2. Resolved, That we heartily indorse the wise, political and commercial Administration of President GRANT, by which our national debt has been so largely reduced.

3. Resolved, That a tariff for revenue is indispensable, and should be so adjusted as not to become prohibitory to the industrial interests of any class or section of the country, while securing to our home industry the complete control of the home market.

4. Resolved, That we are opposed to any system of land grants or granting public lands to railroad or other corporations, and we demand that the public domain be reserved for actual settlers, in amounts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, and that the authority to make such grants be withdrawn from the Congress of the United States.

5. Resolved, That we are opposed to any system of granting public lands to railroad or other corporations without ample provision being made for securing their speedy sale at moderate prices, and early occupancy, upon fair and liberal terms, by actual settlers, who shall be required to make a home upon the land.

6. Resolved, That we are in favor of an immediate and complete resumption of the affairs of the State; and with this view, we invite the attention of our Congressmen to the necessity of a speedy adjustment of the Alabama claims.

7. Resolved, That while we, as Americans, we feel in duty bound to preserve a just and equitable neutrality in the contest now raging in Europe, we cannot but forget that in our late war the sympathies and material aid of the German states were freely given us, and we do not hesitate to declare our unqualified sympathy with the aspirations of the Germans to maintain and defend their national unity; and we condemn the course which the Democratic Press of the country has been and is now pursuing in support of a despotic and tyrannical Power, which is now waging war against a people deserving peace and aspiring to a republican form of government.

8. Resolved, That the Republican Party of Iowa will come to the rescue of the rights of every nation, irrespective of race or color, voluntarily seeking a home in our midst; and that all the rights and privileges which we as citizens demand for ourselves we will freely accord to them.

9. Resolved, That we are in favor of amending our Naturalization laws by striking out the word white from the same wherever it occurs.

The following State ticket was nominated: For Judges of the Supreme Court, C. C. Cole, J. D. Day; and W. E. Miller; for Auditor of State, John Russell; for Secretary of State, Ed. Wright; for Treasurer of State, S. R. Rankin; for Register of State Land Office, Aaron Brown; for Attorney-General, Henry O'Connor; for Supreme Court Reporter, E. H. Stiles; for Clerk of the Supreme Court, Charles Lindemann. This ticket will be elected by 35,000 majority.

Democratic District Convention in New Jersey—Hon. John T. Bird Nominated for Congress in the Third District.

The Democratic Convention met, yesterday, at Somerville, N. J., for the nomination of a Congressman in the Third New-Jersey District. The meeting was called to order, at 11 A. M., by WM. PATTERSON, Chairman of the last Convention, and Judge SHARP was elected President, and the following gentlemen were elected Secretaries: Union, Edward H. Fuller; Hunterdon, John L. Jones; Middlesex, Albert Edwards; Somerset, Albert Clark; Warren, James P. Tomlinson. A Vice-President was also chosen from each of the counties in the district: Union, Jas. Clark; Hunterdon, Dr. John Elmer; Middlesex, Chas. Ayres; Somerset, P. G. Schenck; Warren, Garret Dean. On motion, the rules of the last Convention were adopted. A Committee on Resolutions was then appointed by the Chair, after which, upon the nomination of the Hunterdon County delegation, Hon. JOHN T. BIRD, the present representative, was made the candidate of the Democratic party for a second term.

A committee was appointed to escort Mr. BIRD to the Court-house, in which the meeting was being held. During the absence of the Committee Judge NAAR, of Trenton, was called upon to make an address. Mr. BIRD was then introduced and spoke at some length. He charged the Republicans with having violated their promise made in the Chicago platform, and declared that by this they had forfeited their right to the respect and suffrages of the people. The Committee then reported a series of resolutions bearing on the state of the country and upon the course of the present Administration, and pledging the full support of the party to the nominee of the Convention. The meeting then adjourned.

This is the most strongly Democratic district in New-Jersey. It includes the counties of Warren, Hunterdon, Union, Somerset and Middlesex, and gave at the last election a Democratic majority of nearly 2,000.

GENERAL NOTES.

The Democrats of the Fourth New-Jersey District will probably again support Col. RAFFERTY for Congress.

Ex-Senator BENJAMIN STARK has returned to Oregon, after eight years of absence—it is understood, with the design of being a candidate for United States Senator.

Mr. SYDNEY MYERS, of Chicago, Ill., has been honored with a letter from Ex-Senator SCHERALDW, of Pennsylvania, explaining that gentleman's views on representations and the applicability to nominating conventions.

The Worcester Spy, in dealing with the temperance men of Massachusetts, says it would be much more commendable in these gentlemen, and much more consistent with their temperance professions, to direct their efforts earnestly, systematically and persistently to secure an efficient execution of the law as it stands. Heretofore there has been, not a lack of law against the sale of intoxicating drinks, but a lack of such popular support of the law in our towns and cities, as was needed to secure its complete and constant enforcement. So it is now. But what have these men done, heretofore, and what are they doing now, to remove the most serious difficulty the prohibitory law had encountered?

A Convention of the "State Temperance Party," of Illinois, will be held at Bloomington, Aug. 31, "for the purpose of perfecting the organization of the party, nominating such State officers as are to be elected this Fall, and a Congressman at large."

Gen. JOHN BEATTY has been nominated by the Republicans of the Eighth Congressional District of Ohio. JAMES R. HUBBELL, ex-Republican, is the Democratic candidate. Two years ago, Gen. BEATTY carried the district by 800 votes, defeating a much stronger candidate than HUBBELL.

The Louisville Commercial says of the recent election in Kentucky, that "hardly a single negro voted in Calloway County. There was no violence on the day of election but the amount of talk before it was such as to convince the colored voters that they had better stay away from the polls. At the Cuba Precinct, in Graves County, the negroes were driven from the polls by threatened violence."

A Convention of the several State Republican Associations was held at Washington on Tuesday evening, and an organization perfected by the election of A. M. CLAPP, of New-York, President, and CHARLES T. MURRAY, Secretary. Col. COWIN was subsequently elected Financial Agent.

The Virginia State Journal says the Republican Party must look well to their and strengthen its numbers from all available sources by trustworthy recruits. It must prepare, as BISMARCK has prepared, for the future in the time of peace. We may lose a few preliminary skirmishes, but no matter, if only we have our forces well in hand for the great decisive battle in 1872.

The Nashville, Tenn., Banner says that Col. J. H. SAVAGE, of that State, has declined a nomination for Congress because of the Fourteenth Amendment. "Nevertheless, he thinks the United States has no sufficient cause to hold him, in law and morals, an enemy and a rebel, for he has a rebel flag and a loyal leg—one shattered under the United States flag at Molino del Rey, and the other under the Confederate States flag at Perryville."

The Bloomington Pantagraph says that Col. MERRIAM, candidate for Congress in the Eighth District of Illinois, has facilities for visiting at least four of the counties of his district, such as few candidates for Congress ever had. He lives at the junction of McLean, Tazewell and Logan Counties, and near the corner of De Witt. His farm is in McLean, Tazewell and Logan; his dwelling is in Tazewell, his barn in Logan, and the bulk of his crop is raised in McLean. He eats in one county, feeds his horse in another, plows with him in a third, goes to church in a fourth, and will go to Congress from all of them.

In the Louisiana Republican State Convention, recently held, Gov. WARMOTH and Lieut.-Gov. DUNN (colored) were pitted against one another for President. The vote was by ballot, and DUNN was elected by 35 votes against 25 for WARMOTH. WARMOTH arose and moved that the election of DUNN be declared unanimous. The Lieutenant-Governor said: "It is the first time, I believe, in the history of this Union, that the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of a State have been members of the same convention, and I am sure it is the first time that a Governor and Lieutenant-Governor have been candidates against each other for the Presidency of a convention." The Lieutenant-Governor, turning to the Governor, continued: "I like the Governor very well. I thank you, gentlemen of the convention, for the compliment you have paid me in electing me over him. I shall endeavor to perform the duties you have assigned to me faithfully and impartially."

The Boston Advertiser says: "It was understood at the Tremont Temple Convention, yesterday, that Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS would accept the nomination for Governor. It was also expected that he would receive the nomination of the Labor Reform Convention at Worcester in September. The more enthusiastic members counted upon a considerable accession from Mr. PHILLIPS' antislavery friends, who have seldom voted at all. A fair clipping from the Democratic side was also anticipated with some confidence, on account of the favor Mr. PHILLIPS has won with intelligent Irishmen by his eloquent eulogy of O'CONNELL. Altogether, his supporters were able to promise a handsome vote with pretty good reason.

The True Georgian says "the Republican Party is largely in the majority throughout the State. The act for the enforcement of the Fifteenth Amendment, the regulations for protecting the polls, which Attorney-General AKERMAN will see carried out, and the timely warning he gives the Democracy in his anti-prolongation letter, which we see begins to make them tremble, will secure not only peace and good order at the polls, but a fair expression of the popular will at the ballot-box. Let these things be done, and the 8th of November next will witness a grand victory for national Republicanism throughout the State of Georgia."

The Wilmington Commercial says that the Republicans are uniting for the overthrow of the Democratic Party in Delaware.

"The new vote gives the party an opportunity for success, and with a common earnest effort on all hands, success can and will be achieved. It cannot be reached without a united front and full vote; it cannot be reached without the aid, sympathy and work of the Conservative Republicans. But they will give their aid. We look confidently to them, in this hour of vital political importance to the present and future of Delaware, to come forward to the work with the old war spirit in their hearts, and help to organize a crushing blow upon our disorganized and alarmed opponents. Surely the earnest tongue of NATHANIEL H. SMITHERS cannot be silent in a contest where there is a sure opportunity of overturning the Saulsbury dynasty, and substituting a man like THOMAS F. COUNSELL, than whom, to quote Mr. SMITHERS' own generous words, there is no man from Brandywine to Baltimore, in whom I have more confidence, if elected Governor of Delaware. For a personal friend, a steadfast Republican, an honest and God-fearing man, and a public-spirited citizen, Mr. SMITHERS would surely take the contest with heart and soul. We know it is for victory and victory over the iron hand of the present State control, we know he cannot be found slow or faint-spirited."

THE CITY.

Important Meeting of the Twenty-first District Republican Association.

An unusually large meeting of the Twenty-first Assembly District Union Republican Association was held last evening at the headquarters, corner of One-Hundred and Ninety-seventh street and Third-avenue, Mr. WILLIAM H. DE CAMP presiding.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee the previous evening, a bold attempt was made by two ambitious members to get control of the Association. This action aroused the members of the Association, and hence the more than ordinarily large meeting.

The action referred to was the ignoring of a list of forty-three names of proposed members which had been sent to the Executive Committee for consideration and approval or rejection. The two members indicated above, not believing the proposed members would be quiet tools in their hands, prevailed upon the remainder of the members of the Committee present to reject the whole list without considering it.

In view of this action of the Executive Committee, Mr. E. BROWNE, Jr., moved that the Association take up the names separately and consider them.

Ex-Judge WALSH said the Executive Committee had violated the constitution in not taking action on the list of proposed members sent them for confirmation. He believed the Association was not yet strong enough to the augmentation of their numbers was not desirable. It was the prerogative of the general body to call the Executive Committee to a sense of its duty, which it had grossly violated, and supersede it by considering the names then and there.

Mr. BRANNAN regarded the Executive Committee as a partisan clique. He believed the names were objected to chiefly because they were almost all Irish. They differed vastly from President GRANT, when they seemed to think that an Irishman could not be a good Republican, for he had, to show his appreciation of the Irish Republicans, appointed TOM MURPHY Collector of this port. (Applause.)

Mr. FINCH said the majority of the names proposed were those of known Democrats. He would only instance one that of Gen. GLEASON, who ran for office last Fall on the Democratic ticket.

Mr. SMITH remarked that their Association was not solely intended to make better Republicans out of naturally good ones, but to reclaim, and call mistaken Democrats to repentance, and "point out to them the error of their ways. He believed Gen. GLEASON would be a tower of strength to the Association. He was six feet three inches in his stockings. [Laughter.]

After some further discussion, the amendment was lost, and the original motion carried. The names were then taken up, and the entire list rejected by the Executive Committee, unanimously elected.

On the reading of Gen. JOHN HAMILTON GLEASON's name by the Secretary, the President observed that he met Gen. GLEASON the day before, and he told him he was a Republican in heart and soul. He intended to work hard in the Republican interest this campaign, and he argued the City to deliver addresses. He also stated that he was heartily in favor of the policy of Gen. GRANT, in whose executive abilities he had the most unbounded faith. Gen. GLEASON was elected amid deafening applause.

Some further business of a routine character having been transacted, the meeting adjourned.

THE BINGHAMTON MURDER.

Additional Examination—The Murderers Still at Large—The Reward Offered.

It seems that the burglary and murderous at Binghamton affected an entrance through a door in the cellar. The door has on it three bolts. The top bolt slides down one be reached by placing a person's hand under the door, where the sill had been removed, in consequence of addition which the Messrs. HALLENBECK are making to their store. The two other bolts were fastened by boring with auger through the door. The holes were within a few inches of the bolts, which shows that they were made by a person who was somewhat familiar with the premises. Having gained entrance, it is supposed one of the burglars was placed as a guard, or to give an alarm, over Messrs. MERRICK and BURROUGHS, while the other two were carrying off the goods. It must have been some time before the sleepers awakened, for the two persons who had been selected to take out the goods had collected a vast heap of dollars in the shape of the choicest silks, and were placing them in the yard in the rear. While they were gone out the sleepers were awakened. Mr. BURROUGHS was the first to stare up, when he was hit over the head by a heavy iron bar. The attacks immediately struggled with the robbers, and a desperate conflict took place, as the articles strewn on the floor clearly show. The robber's cry for help soon brought his comrades to his aid.

AMERICAN INDUSTRY.

The Coming Exhibition of the American Institute—A Grand Display Anticipated—Preparations of the Managers—The Improved Empire Rink Open for the Reception of Goods.

The Board of Managers of the American Institute announce that the Empire Skating Rink on Third-avenue, near Sixty-second-street, having just been enlarged and improved, is now open for the reception of goods, and on Wednesday, Sept. 7, the Grand Exhibition will be formally opened to the public by an address at 12 M. It will continue open every secular day until Nov. 2, when the closing address will be delivered and awards to successful exhibitors announced.

The following is a list of the new officers chosen for the present year:

HORACE GREELEY, President.
Wm. Hall, Chas. F. Daly and Nathan G. Ely, Vice-Presidents.
George Payton, Recording Secretary; Samuel D. Tillman, Corresponding Secretary; Sylvester R. Comstock, Treasurer.
Board of Managers—Orestes Cleveland, Wm. H. Butler, J. G. Herriott, C. W. Hall, Wm. J. Carpenter, Geo. Timpson, J. W. Stratton, James Knight, Thos. Rutter, Thos. Hicks, Saml. R. Wells, J. B. Lyman, J. T. Smith, Wm. Shriver, W. E. Fenn, Thos. D. Stetson, Jas. E. Smith, Chas. E. Burd, E. S. Dickinson, Chas. H. Clayton, Henry J. Newton, A. M. Eagleson, Frank Everdell, Thos. Parker.

The managers expressly desire and urge exhibitors to hurry forward all goods for of a perishable character at once, thus securing good locations for exhibition and also avoiding the inevitable rush of articles which always occurs about the day of the public opening.

The building enlargements and improvements, including decorations, painting and refitting, have been quite extensive, involving an expense of about $12,000. A largely-increased area of space has been secured by leasing adjoining lots of ground, thereby enabling the exposition and machinery departments to the extent of about 100,000 square feet. The painters are now at work, and the interior woodwork is all being painted white.

The Second-avenue entrance to the building has been enlarged, and is now especially adapted to the reception of machinery. A new adjoining building, forty feet wide, has also been completed, which is especially designed for steam power. New main lines of shafting, with stationary engines, provided with water and gas pipes, has been erected by the managers.

The Third-avenue main public entrance is being improved by enlargement, and a covered passage-way to the interior, which will be covered, painted and lined on either side with evergreens and flowers. Facilities for visitors reaching the Fair this Fall have been considerably increased by the extension of the Madison-avenue railway line, which is now running cars from the Astor House to Yorkville.

A new Belgian pavement has been recently completed in East Sixty-fourth-street from Fifth to Third avenues, making a fine carriage-way from the west side to the east.

The managers have issued the following circular:

"The desire expressed by many to avail themselves of this occasion to exhibit their produce will not admit of a second notice. American industry is making such rapid strides in every branch of the use for art, that no adequate conception can be formed of the actual advance unless specimens of improved machinery and products are brought together for examination and comparative tests. In the Old World the development of new lines for utilizing the forces and products of nature is so slow a matter, that the annual displays, full and satisfactory, under the auspices of a single Government, is not deemed essential. An international exposition, once in a decade of years, serves to satisfy the pride and curiosity of the European public; but in our own country the love of novelty, the passion for improvement, and the yearning for a better way, is so strong and general, that annual exhibitions are demanded, and those who can afford to try new methods and processes, for their own benefit, are found to be the delighted patrons of such displays. It must be admitted that county and state fairs, and exhibitions by incorporated societies are very frequent, yet in most instances they do not excite unusual interest, except in their immediate neighborhood.

"The American Institute may, therefore, be said to occupy a position in this country similar in its character and influence. Its chief object is to call together from all quarters of the Union, at stated periods, specimens of the best work, the greatest skill and the richest ingenuity, and to keep the public informed. The annual exhibition of the Institute, on account of its completeness, may be regarded as the best index of American progress.

"It affords unusual facilities for the display of new inventions, and by the long continuance of the exhibition all classes of visitors ample time to satisfy themselves as to the actual value and merit of any article they may desire to use, thus affording to manufacturers and producers a rare and valuable opportunity. To those who have failed to secure the highest award at state exhibitions, it holds out strong inducements to again present their work and inventions in such improved form as will enable them to bear of the palm, and their expectation in this regard will be naturally increased by the assurance that the managers use their best endeavors to select competent and impartial judges, whose decisions will not be questioned or invalidated by any personal bias or official interference.

"A permanent classification of articles on exhibition has been arranged, and seven departments selected. They are as follows:

1. Department of Fine Arts and Education, including seven groups, consisting of paintings, engravings, photographs, sculpture, musical instruments, printing, &c.

2. Department of the Dwelling, including seven groups, consisting of apparatus for warming rooms, cook-stoves, lamps, kitchen-ware, carpets, furniture, doors, window-sashes, &c.

3. Department of Dress and Handicraft, including seven groups, consisting of apparel for males and females, clothes, jewelry, writing desks, &c.

4. Department of Chemistry and Mineralogy, including seven groups, consisting of soaps, acids, leather, paints, dye-stuffs, flour, meal, &c.

5. Department of Engines and Machinery, Consisting of stationary engines, pumping machinery, machinery for working of metals and wood.

6. Department of Intercommunication, consisting of locomotive engines, carriages, models of vessels, telegraphic apparatus, fire engines, &c.

7. Department of Agriculture and Horticulture, consisting of plants, flowers, fruits, butter, cheese, mowers, reapers and products of the soil used in the arts.

The grade of premiums and testimonials will be as follows:

First Premium—Large medal and diploma, which the jury will set forth the reasons which govern the judges in rendering their decision.

Second Premium—A medal and diploma. An entrance fee of $5 will be charged upon all goods for competition.

Tables for exhibitors are furnished by the managers without extra charge. No petroleum or patent medicines will be allowed a place in the exhibition. No goods can be sold and delivered within the Fair.

The Board of Managers have nearly perfected arrangements with all the prominent railway, steamboat and express companies to severally return freight free all articles exhibited, the freight on which shall have been paid to New-York. Several of the leading features of the exposition, which will probably become popular, are entirely new inventions. Among others is a large church organ by JARDINE, which is expected to work upon a new principle through the adoption of a pressure of twelve pounds. This unusual instrument will be placed against the rear eastern wall, in an elevated position, about twenty feet from the floor.

One of the largest soda-water fountains ever built will be erected in the middle of the main hall.

A newly-invented hotel elevator apparatus will also be on exhibition and in working condition, treasing those who may desire it, to a ride to the top of the Rink.

The Committee of Fine Arts and Education, consists of Messrs. NEWTON, STETSON and CLAYTON. On Engines and Machinery, Messrs. SHRIVER, SPRAYTON and DICKINSON. On Agriculture and Horticulture, Messrs. CARPENTER, LYMAN and BURR.

The Police—An Official Head Struck Off.

Chief of Police BOWEN was dismissed by the Police Commissioners of New-Haven, Conn., on Saturday night, in a stormy session which lasted till 1 o'clock Sunday morning. He was tried upon the charge recently made by the Palladium that he, in his official capacity, in company with another man, blackmailed a man out of $15.

A Peculiar Case of Alleged Parricide—A Boy Shoots His Father for No Reason.

A singular case of alleged parricide is reported as having come up before the Shrewsbury Assizes lately. It was proved that on the evening of April 13 Dr. WILSON was lying on the sofa in the dining-room asleep. He was awakened by a severe blow on the eye, as he at the time thought, and before he could recover himself he felt himself wounded in the head. He had, in fact, been shot with two bullets from a revolver; one had entered the eye, the other had lodged upon the skull. He saw no one, but the first thing he heard was his son, the prisoner, calling loudly for assistance. Another important witness was Miss MARTHA WILSON, the prisoner's sister. She proved that she and her brother were sitting upstairs when, some ten minutes before the shots were fired, he left the room and went into the surgery, which is on the ground floor, near the dining-room. Her attention was attracted by the first pistol-shot. She listened, and then hearing another, she hastened to the head of the stairs, when she heard her brother calling, "PATTY, PATTY; papa has shot himself." These were the principal facts of the case, but further evidence was gone into to show that the wounds were inflicted by a pistol which belonged to Dr. WILSON, and to which a stranger would not have access, and also that the prisoner, in driving to Shrewsbury for a medical man, had purposely driven more slowly than was necessary. For the prisoner it was proved that he had been an affectionate son and brother, that there was no motive whatever for the commission of the crime, and that it was possible for a stranger to have entered the house, and, finding the pistol, to have shot Dr. WILSON, to avoid detection. Mr. JAMES, in an exhaustive speech of nearly two hours' duration, strongly urged these views, and after hearing the summing up of the Judge, the jury, at a late hour, returned a verdict of not guilty, a result which was received with loud applause.

GERMAN AID COLLECTIONS.

What their Object is—A Couple of Newspaper Fourteen—How in Helping their Countrymen They Help Themselves.

The echoes of the loudly sounding the European war alarm wafted to our shores, no sooner reached the ears of the patriotic emigrés from the "Vaterlands" worthy Germans in our midst—informing them that their beloved country was about to resort to arms to punish their Gallic neighbors for past and present insults, than they prepared to give her all the assistance in their power. Meetings were held and resolutions adopted to the effect that steamships should be taken throughout the country for the establishment of German National Aid Associations, by whose agency contributions should be collected and forwarded to the mother country, weekly or monthly. Money, the sinews of war in large and small sums, the patriotic Germans were willing to give for the benefit of their suffering friends and deserted of their native land. Societies were organized under the best auspices, and with such were Gen. SIGEL, Mr. WASSERDORNE of the Germania Life Insurance Company, Dr. VON HOLST, Mr. PARRACH, and other prominent and worthy gentlemen at their head. They had for their object the raising of a fund for the support both of the wounded German soldiers and of the widows and orphans of those slain in the war. King WILLIAM of Prussia was notified by telegraph of the existence of this patriotic movement. The utmost enthusiasm took possession of the "fatherland" "Germania" swelled in breast, and all alike with spirit and energy entered into the affair. In each ward of this City local German Aid Clubs sprang into life, and out of a chaotic tumult of national desperation a regularly organized system came. The City was divided into districts to which men were appointed for the purpose of visiting the German residents therein, and inducing them to contribute. The collectors went to work cheerfully, and success crowned their efforts. But despite the precautionary measures taken to guard against fraud, rascals, seeing before them a fine opportunity for personal emolument, appeared, and now also to improve. A Times reporter happened in the vicinity of a couple of German aid collectors the other day, whose operations very much interested him. These men, we will say, for the information of our readers, both keep lager-beer saloons not far from Printing-house Square; as we were told, and belong to the German Aid Societies in an adjoining ward. They start every morning from their homes to visit some of their countrymen in the neighborhood, with a view to getting some money for King WILLIAM's soldiers and a little for themselves, as the sequel will show. One of them, whose name is FRITZ, one day last week, called upon a German woman who keeps a bakery, to inform her that her beloved daughter of Prussia, and, best of all, a widow, with a good business, FRITZ—a friend of the family, by the way—walked into the story about 10 A. M., (the time of day at which it is most free from customers, and the good proprietress is busy at expecting the arrival of her there. In this he was disappointed, that not her son instead. This young man, aged twenty-two or three, is in the habit of attending to all matters connected with the business for his mother, and on being asked by FRITZ for her replied that she could not then be seen. "How, over, FRITZ," said he, "I know I can attend to anything just as well as she could." "Oh, and the other, "it is nothing; I only want to speak mit her a little. I comes another time."

Now the young man was rather smart, and knowing his visitor to be a collector, shrewdly surmised the object of his visit and inquiringly said: "You want money, I suppose, for the German Aid Society? Eh!" "Well, dat yes," replied the other; "I come to see your mudder and ask her if she gif something for the Prussian soldiers vat fights mit the Franzosen. Every man gif a little and all helps de King a little bit, and he knocks dem Franzosse to pieces recht away." Also in his place.

The son, looking hard at the corpulent collector, suggested that KING WILLIAM had got himself into the "mess," and if he wanted any aid to carry it on, he should seek for it among his crowned brother despots in Europe, rather than from the honest, hard-working Germans in the States, who owed him nothing, and had enough to do to support themselves. Moreover, he continued, there are plenty of poor Germans in this City, not to say country, who stand in need of our aid. And every dollar we can spare ought to be devoted to their use. Look at our German Hospital in the City, unfinished for want of funds. If you come with proper credentials soliciting money in its behalf, I am sure we, that is, mother and the rest of the family, could very readily contribute $20 in an instant. But as we are not collecting for KING WILLIAM or those who serve under him. They do not fight for us. Let those for whom they do battle see to it that they and theirs are provided for.

This was a crusher to Fritz, and he departed. Next day his friend, collector No. 2, Hans thinking No. 1 had not displayed diplomatic skill sufficient, rendered upon seeing the young man himself. He went, however, but to meet with more than Fritz. On the contrary, instead of getting any satisfaction from his visit, he afforded a great deal to the parties visited. He told them that he had been very successful in his circuit, and had taken about $10 in subscriptions in one day. Being asked if the whole of that sum could be handed into the head-quarters of the Association, he said that it would, less $20 expenses which he had incurred during the day. The details of these expenses are as follows: Having worked during the forenoon and obtained a good many dollars from the German women in their district, who, it may be (well to say, are always very patriotic, and under pressure can be made to come down handsomely whenever appealed to in their country's behalf, the collectors, these in question, we learn, met at some restaurant, as aforesaid. Here they counted their gains, in which operation they had to be aided by an extra glass of lager and a few bottles of champagne, the cost for these being paid out of the contributions in their hands. Champagne $5 or $7 a bottle, fifty-cent cigars and a rocherche repast for two made a very respectable bill to defray. Add to it these honest gentlemen's payment for their time set at their own value—$10 or $15 a day—and the $20 expense are easily reached. That there should be any check on these mal-practices, we were told, is very difficult, seeing that the shrewd collector, although obliged to turn in a list of his receipts with the names of the contributor to each item, could and did avoid detection by omitting to record the names of those poor women who gave their mites for their suffering countrymen's sake, and in ignorance of the law which called for the publication of their patriotic deed. So that nothing being said at head-quarters about the matter, nothing is known of the fraud. Our informant told us also that these men made no secret of their operations, which he has no doubt, which helps them with the favorite method to a very good remuneration for a very short day's work while the war excitement lasts, and no doubt causes these men and any others who follow their footsteps to feel that this terrible calamity to Europe has worked them pecuniary good.

Elopement from Branford, Conn.—Arrest at the Lotharia.

The New-Haven Palladium of the 17th inst. says:

"An elopement is just now exciting the good people of Pine Orchard, in the staid town of Branford. The GEORGE JONES, a young Scotchman, twenty-two years of age, and Miss JENNIE LEWIS, aged fifteen, daughter of Mr. CHARLES LEWIS. The lovers had been keeping company some time, but the young man's suit was unfavorably met by the young lady's parents. They finally concluded to take the matter into their own hands, and took the evening train for New-Haven on Monday, being accompanied hither by a young friend named ARCHIBALD GARDNER. They sought the office of Registrar BISSELL, but that official declined issuing a marriage license because of the young lady's minority. They subsequently proceeded to the wharf, and embarked on the steamer for the Metropolis, REED making an unsuccessful effort to secure a state-room. GARDNER returned up-town, passed the night at the Merchants' Hotel, and was arrested Tuesday morning, Miss Lewis' friends having telegraphed the facts to the Police during the night. They also telegraphed to New-York to have the runaways arrested, but nothing had been heard Tuesday night. GARDNER convinced Mr. LEWIS that he had no hand in the affair, and he was released."

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

No sales were made at the Exchange yesterday, the only one advertised, the lease of the Gleaham Hotel, on Fifth-avenue, being postponed until the 2d inst. The attendance was good, quite a number of parties interested in the above-proposed transaction being present, and expecting it to take place. Real estate business still continues dull, and little of interest occurs to disturb the existing monotony. It can hardly be expected to revive until after the 1st of September.

The auction sale of real estate belonging to the Evergreen Cemetery Association, in Brooklyn, which was to have taken place yesterday at No. 16 Court-street, in that city, was again postponed to the 2d of September at noon. The cause of delay, the Post of last evening remarks, was a recent motion in the Supreme Court to set aside the order of sale and allow the creditors to contest the validity of the bonds, which are liens upon the property. The affairs of the Evergreen Cemetery Association are very much complicated. Since its organization, about twenty years ago, a number of its managers have bought adjoining farm lands, and resold them to the Association at several times the original cost. In order to indemnify themselves for the sale they would issue and sell bonds of the Association. It is now proposed that the creditors should be permitted to contest the validity of these bonds. This action would reopen the whole case and require a repetition of the legal proceedings of the last three years. Its result would probably lead, as now, to a sale; for it is said that by a sale only can the affairs of the Association be properly arranged. According to the present arrangement of PHILO T. RUGGLES, the referee, half the proceeds, should a sale take place, will accrue to the creditors and half to the bondholders. The amount of land to be sold comprises about 160 acres, all of which, except about seven acres, or over 100 City lots, must be sold for burial purposes only. The sale will in no way interfere with the rights of the present plot owners. Their rights will all be preserved.

Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER were eminently successful yesterday in their adjourned sale of lots on the Berry Farm, at Carlstadt, N. J. The attendance was large, the bidding spirited, and the lots sold disposed of at good prices. Upward of 200 were struck off at an average price of $250 per lot. The details of the transactions will be found below. The lots are each 25x100.

Consolidated Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company, for the purpose of providing for the payment of the several mortgage debts as they become due, has executed a mortgage to the Union Trust Company, of New-York, as Trustee, upon the whole of its Railroad and branches, payable on the first day of July, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

COUPON BONDS of $1,000 each will be issued, with interest at Seven per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, on the first day of January and July, in each year, and REGISTERED BONDS of $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000 each, without coupons, with interest at Seven per centum per annum, payable quarterly, on the first day of January, April, July and October, in each year, principal and interest payable at the office of the Union Trust Company in New-York.

We call the attention of investors especially to this class of REGISTERED BONDS, which, on account of the SECURITY AFFORDED AGAINST LOSS BY ROBBERY, FIRE OR OTHERWISE AND THE PAYMENT OF QUARTERLY INTEREST, offer an investment peculiarly desirable.

ELIZABETHTOWN & PADUCAH

RAILROAD,

OF KENTUCKY,

FIRST MORTGAGE

8 Per Cent. Twenty-Year

Convertible Bonds.

This Road, connecting the important points of Louisville and Paducah, is an entire long and plains through a rich agricultural and mineral section of the State of Kentucky, the profits of which, it is believed, will be abundantly remunerative.

Nearly the whole line is under contract, and twenty-nine miles of the road are already in successful operation.

The stock subscriptions (of which the City of Louisville subscribed $1,000,000) amount to $3,000,000.

To lay the rails and completely equip the road, THREE MILLION DOLLARS of First Mortgage Convertible Bonds have been authorized, bearing eight per cent interest, payable semi-annually at the BANK OF AMERICA, in the City of New-York, on the 1st days of March and September.

These Bonds are the only lien upon the property and franchises of the Company, and are deposited with the UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, which will pay over the proceeds of the bonds to the Railroad Company only in the ratio of construction.

The most right care has been exercised to protect the interest of the bondholders by every legal safeguard. The bonds can be converted into stock at the option of the holder for seven years after the completion of the road. The management is in the hands of some of the most responsible and favorably known business men of Kentucky. With the guarantee of their able and faithful direction, and the large amount of stock subscribed, these bonds form a very safe and desirable investment.

The price of the bonds at present is 87½ and accrued interest.

Any further information will be furnished upon application to the undersigned.

SARATOGA RACES.

Sixth and Last Day of the Summer Meeting.

A Splendid Assemblage, Beautiful Weather, and Four Capital Races—Biddy Malone Wins the Hurdle-Race, Flash of Lightning the Dash, Helmbold the Four-mile Race, and Glenelg the Consolation Purse.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CONGRESS HALL, SARATOGA, Thursday, Aug. 18, 1870.

There was a magnificent assemblage of visitors on the course today, to witness the racing of the sixth and last day of the meeting. The same delightful weather prevailed as on the previous days and the highly interesting character of the racing afforded the highest enjoyment to the thousands of spectators.

There were four races on the day's programme, the first being that popular contest known as a hurdle-race. Three horses ran of the four entered, all old opponents—Oysterman, Biddy Malone and Sir Joseph, Morris being withdrawn on account of lameness. It proved a highly interesting race, Sir Joseph leading for a mile and a half, when Biddy closed on him, was at his saddle-girths as the last hurdle was jumped, and her superior speed over the flat enabled her to win by a length from Oysterman, who beat Sir Joseph for second place in the last few strides.

The second race was for horses that had run and not won at the two meetings, three-quarters of a mile dash. It was won by the favorite after a fine race with Chillicothe, the pair being the only horses really in the race, although eight started.

The four-mile race was won by Helmbold, after a magnificent race with Harry Atherton and Pat Malloy. At one time Helmbold looked as if he was beaten, for he showed unmistakable signs of quitting, but he came again, and, his opponents being thoroughly tired out, he managed to beat them a length in 7:32¾.

Glenelg carried off the Consolation Purse in gallant style, beating Alta Vela by two lengths, after a sharp contest.

THE HURDLE-RACE.

This race was for a purse of $600, of which the winner took $300, and the second and third horses $200 and $100 each. The entries were Biddy Malone, Oysterman, Sir Joseph and Morris, but the latter was withdrawn on account of lameness. Oysterman had the call, selling for $830, Biddy Malone $600, Sir Joseph $500. Sir Joseph, with Oysterman second, led throughout the first mile, all the horses jumping the hurdles magnificently. On the second mile Biddy Malone closed rapidly on Sir Joseph, caught him as they turned into the homestretch and both jumped the last hurdle at the same moment. A fine finish ensued, Biddy Malone winning by a length from Oysterman, who came with a rush in the last few yards and beat Sir Joseph. Time—3:27¼.

FIRST RACE.—Handicap hurdle-race; two miles, over eight hurdles; purse, $600; first horse, $300; second horse, $200; third horse, $100.

THE SECOND RACE.

Eight started: Flash of Lightning, Eagle, King's Excuse, Chillicothe, Soho, Kelso, Southlock and Norton colt. Flash of Lightning was the favorite at $60 to $100 against the field, and getting in front when the flag fell, he won easily after a good race with Chillicothe by a length, King's Excuse third, Southlock fourth, Norton fifth and Kelso last. Time—1:17¾.

THE FOUR-MILE DASH.

The third race was a dash of four miles for a purse of $1,200, for which the starters were Helmbold, Carrie Atherton and Pat Malloy. Helmbold was a hot favorite, the odds of $100 to $40 being currently offered and taken, the fielders relying on the staying qualities of the game mare Carrie Atherton, and also on the fact that Helmbold had never run four miles. Carrie Atherton made the running for three miles and a half, with Pat Malloy one length behind, and Helmbold at his quarters. Pat Malloy then challenged and passed the mare, and the two appeared to have the race to themselves as they turned into the homestretch, for Helmbold had the appearance of a beaten horse struggling on with indomitable gameness. The leaders began to come back to him as they dashed up the stretch, and catching and passing Carrie Atherton half way up, he challenged Pat Malloy, who was too tired to make an effort, and Helmbold won the race by a length, with two lengths between Pat Malloy, who was second, and Carrie Atherton. Time—7:32¾.

THIRD RACE.—Purse $1,200, for all ages; four miles:

Time—7:32¾.

THE CONSOLATION RACE.

The last race was the Consolation Race, for ages, a mile and three-quarters. The runners were Glenelg, Alta Vela and Tom Woolfolk. Glenelg sold for $3,200, Alta Vela for $1,700 and Tom Woolfolk for $800. Alta Vela led throughout until entering the homestretch, when Glenelg made his effort, and passing Woolfolk, challenged Alta Vela, and beat her under the string by two lengths. Time—3:12¾.

FOURTH RACE.—Consolation Purse, $600, for all ages; one and three-quarter miles; horses beaten once during the second meeting allowed 7 pounds; twice, 14 pounds; three times, 21 pounds.

Saleswomen's Early-Closing Association—Talk and Action.

The Saleswomen's Early-closing Association held its regular weekly meeting last evening, at Plimpton Hall. There were quite a large number of ladies present, and not a few gentlemen, all of whom seemed to sympathize with the objects of the organization. The meeting was presided over by R. W. HAVENSTON, of the Clerks' Early-closing Association, in the absence of the regular officer. After disposing of the ordinary business of the Association, the Chairman introduced HERMON, the Count JOHANNES, the renowned orator of the evening, a personal fountain of wisdom on all subjects, and the "first born of my mother." After a few words on the sad incidents of the wanderings of Mr. NATHAN, the "Count," amid innumerable classical quotations, evolved the following practical ideas having application to the business of the Association. He was in favor of allowing the saleswomen in the public stores to have seats in places when not employed at their duties. They were not working, he said, in opposition to the interests of the employers, but on the contrary, if the employers would do their justice, and practice even ordinary humanity toward the ladies in their employment, it would result in greater advantage to the employers than they now possess; many of the employers who keep open to a late hour do not gain enough to pay for the gas. He concluded with a word of counsel to all lady customers not to deal in stores where they find that ladies are not allowed seats, and where the stores is kept open till a late hour. This, he thought, would be an attack to which even ALEXANDER the Great (STEWART) would yield, especially when it became known that he (the Count JOHANNES) had volunteered as the advocate, whether before the Courts or elsewhere, without money and without price, of the interests of the Association and its members.

Miss NINTA followed in some sensible and practical remarks. Although the attendance was quite large, she said, the members of the Association would be still more increased in September next. She related instances in which some of the wealthy citizens' wives in this City had refused to trade in stores where they kept open after 8, and refused to allow their money saleswomen a seat. To the working men's wives she appealed especially. These, she said, continued to deal in the stores up to a late hour, without for a moment considering that they were keeping their own daughters and the daughters of their friends unnecessarily engaged until up to almost midnight. She concluded with some very sensible advice to the young girls, urging them to cultivate self-respect, a feeling of independence, and not to be afraid to assert their rights to their employers or in the Association, and to remain confident in the assurance that the cause will prevail, and they shall yet secure justice and right.

Mr. JOHN McCONNELL added his mite to the cause of the Association in the shape of a speech favorable to its objects. One of the lady members suggested that a committee be appointed to communicate with the Clerks' Early-closing Association and the members of the labor unions, and request that their wives shall not trade in stores after 7 o'clock. These women, it was said, acted against their knowing the consequences of their acts; but she felt assured that the moment they were informed of the results of their conduct they would discontinue it. Committees were appointed to visit the storekeepers in the Broadway and Sixth-avenue and Bleecker-street, and learn who were willing to favor the movement, after which the meeting adjourned.

A HEBREW CHURCH SCHISM.

Grievances of the Brethren Not Asked—An Unauthorized Chanun, and a Mixed Choir—Application for an Injunction.

From the Baltimore American, Aug. 18.

In the Circuit Court for Baltimore City, Judge PHENNEY, there was filed by WILLIAM F. FRICK, Esq., counsel for complainants, Jonas Fundenwald, Louis Goodman, Isaac Arnold, Herman Hable, Bernard Hers, Simon Greenfelder, Hertz Blomdlicin, Simon Halle, Abraham Rothschild, Abraham Rosenfeld, Abraham Nonnberger, Nathan Greenebaum, Hertz Oppenheimer, L. Hellner, Moses Friedenwald, Lazarus Engel, Philip Herzberg, H. L. Hensaler and S. Hartman, on their own behalf and other members of the Baltimore Hebrew congregation corner of Lloyd and Watson streets, vs. Benjamin Hummelreich, (President,) Joel Seliger, (Vice-President,) Joseph M. Schonthal, Treasurer,) and Levi Baer, Jacob Eise, Moses Rosenthal, Moses Jacob Gross and Jacob Henry Neusbaum, (electors,) of said congregation, a bill for an injunction, &c. The bill is quite lengthy and recites the fact of the congregation having been incorporated under the title of "The Electors of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation," by an act of General Assembly, at the December session, 1853; that by a supplement to said act of incorporation, passed December session, 1861, the number of electors, then five in number, was increased to nine, and that the male members over twenty-one years, or a majority of them, should ordain and establish such by-laws and ordinances as were necessary for the government and support of the spiritual and temporal concerns of said congregation, and for governing the proceedings of said electors; provided, however, that no alteration should be made in the mode and form of worship, and in the rites and ceremonies then used in said congregation, except with the assent of two-thirds of the male members in attendance at a regularly called meeting of the congregation. By the constitution of said religious corporation, duly adopted, it was provided that its officers should consist of a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, and six electors, which officers should, together, making nine, form a Board of Managers, to whom the management of the affairs of the congregation should be intrusted, and who should be charged with the duty of seeing that the provisions of the said constitution and of such by-laws as should be adopted by said Board, and approved by the congregation, should be observed.

THE "CHASAN" AND THE "SHAMES."

It was further provided by said constitution that the Secretary, the Chasan, (or Reader of the Service,) the Shames, (or Sexton,) and all other officers, other than of the congregation, should be elected at the regular quarterly meeting in July, and should enter upon their respective duties on the 1st day of October in each and every year. It was further declared by the said constitution, under the articles thereof regulating the form of worship, that the fixed prayers should always be read in the Hebrew language, according to the ritual of the Polish or German Jews, and it was furthermore provided that the said constitution should never be changed or amended, except by proceedings under which proposed alterations or amendments were regularly submitted to a meeting of the congregation convened for the purpose, and adopted by a vote of three-fourths of the members present at such meeting. The bill enumerates the officers of the congregation, (as designated above,) and states that complainants are members of said congregation and corporation, many of them having been connected therewith since its organization, and all of them being deeply concerned in maintaining the ancient and orthodox character of the doctrines, services, rites and ceremonies of their church. The complainants state that of late, however, innovations in doctrines and rites have been introduced, or sought to be introduced, into the services of said synagogue, (Lloyd-street,) in violation of the feelings and against the wishes, votes and protests of complainants. And of some of these, the bill states, the complainants have a right to complain, as being not only in opposition to their views of what is right and orthodox, but in direct and flagrant violation of the fundamental law and charter by which the proceedings of said religious corporation are, as aforesaid, limited and regulated. In the first place, the complainants insist and charge that it is a proceeding contrary in the constitution of their corporation, for an annual election of their Chasan or Recorder, being intended as a salutary restraint upon the exercise of any new or doubtful functions, or the introduction of any heterodox doctrines or ceremonies, is totally important and essential as a part of the fundamental law of the said religious corporation. Nevertheless, while the said provision for an annual election was in full force and unaltered, a majority of the members of the said congregation present at the July meeting of the year 1869 did proceed, in opposition to the expressed wishes and protests of your complainants and others of said members to elect ABRAHAM HOFFMAN the Chasan of said church or congregation for a term of five years instead of one year, and at the July meeting of the present year, 1870, when of right an annual election should have been held for such officer, to serve for one year from the 1st day of October, 1870, no election was held, and it is claimed by the officers of said corporation that the election held in July, 1869, is valid and sufficient to constitute the said HOFFMAN the lawful Chasan of said congregation for the term of five years from the 1st of October, 1869, without re-election.

FEMALES NOT TO SING IN THE CHOIR.

In the second place, according to the custom of the orthodox German Jews from time immemorial, it has not been allowed that females should take part in the rites and ceremonies of the church by singing in a choir with males, and no such mixed choir hath hitherto existed, been permitted or organized in the church aforesaid, of which complainants are members. The bill further states that in violation of the constitution and the supplemental act of Assembly, a large majority of the members in attendance at a meeting of the congregation lately held, not constituting even a majority of the entire body of the members of said congregation, did by a vote determine to organize and use in the ceremonies of said church, a choir of both male and female voices, and such a choir is now organized, and the officers of the congregation have given their assent to the introduction and use of the said choir in the services. The complainants insist and charge that this innovation is in direct violation of the peculiar character of the doctrines and traditions of their Church, which prohibits females from taking such part in its rites and ceremonies, and as such it is an unauthorized and unlawful alteration and corruption, sought to be introduced into the present form of worship, rites and ceremonies of their Church. In the third place (the bill states) the said Chanun, who has been unlawfully elected, as aforesaid, for a term of five years, and who, by virtue of his office, is authorized occasionally by the President to deliver an address before the congregation, has not only from time to time in said addresses promoted doctrines which are not in accordance with the spiritual and temporal concerns of said congregation, and for governing the proceedings of said electors; provided, however, that no alteration should be made in the mode and form of worship, and in the rites and ceremonies then used in said congregation, except with the assent of two-thirds of the male members in attendance at a regularly called meeting of the congregation. By the constitution of said religious corporation, duly adopted, it was provided that its officers should consist of a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, and six electors, which officers should, together, making nine, form a Board of Managers, to whom the management of the affairs of the congregation should be intrusted, and who should be charged with the duty of seeing that the provisions of the said constitution and of such by-laws as should be adopted by said Board, and approved by the congregation, should be observed.

THE "CHASAN" AND THE "SHAMES."

It was further provided by said constitution that the Secretary, the Chasan, (or Reader of the Service,) the Shames, (or Sexton,) and all other officers, other than of the congregation, should be elected at the regular quarterly meeting in July, and should enter upon their respective duties on the 1st day of October in each and every year. It was further declared by the said constitution, under the articles thereof regulating the form of worship, that the fixed prayers should always be read in the Hebrew language, according to the ritual of the Polish or German Jews, and it was furthermore provided that the said constitution should never be changed or amended, except by proceedings under which proposed alterations or amendments were regularly submitted to a meeting of the congregation convened for the purpose, and adopted by a vote of three-fourths of the members present at such meeting. The bill enumerates the officers of the congregation, (as designated above,) and states that complainants are members of said congregation and corporation, many of them having been connected therewith since its organization, and all of them being deeply concerned in maintaining the ancient and orthodox character of the doctrines, services, rites and ceremonies of their church. The complainants state that of late, however, innovations in doctrines and rites have been introduced, or sought to be introduced, into the services of said synagogue, (Lloyd-street,) in violation of the feelings and against the wishes, votes and protests of complainants. And of some of these, the bill states, the complainants have a right to complain, as being not only in opposition to their views of what is right and orthodox, but in direct and flagrant violation of the fundamental law and charter by which the proceedings of said religious corporation are, as aforesaid, limited and regulated. In the first place, the complainants insist and charge that it is a proceeding contrary in the constitution of their corporation, for an annual election of their Chasan or Recorder, being intended as a salutary restraint upon the exercise of any new or doubtful functions, or the introduction of any heterodox doctrines or ceremonies, is totally important and essential as a part of the fundamental law of the said religious corporation. Nevertheless, while the said provision for an annual election was in full force and unaltered, a majority of the members of the said congregation present at the July meeting of the year 1869 did proceed, in opposition to the expressed wishes and protests of your complainants and others of said members to elect ABRAHAM HOFFMAN the Chasan of said church or congregation for a term of five years instead of one year, and at the July meeting of the present year, 1870, when of right an annual election should have been held for such officer, to serve for one year from the 1st day of October, 1870, no election was held, and it is claimed by the officers of said corporation that the election held in July, 1869, is valid and sufficient to constitute the said HOFFMAN the lawful Chasan of said congregation for the term of five years from the 1st of October, 1869, without re-election.

FEMALES NOT TO SING IN THE CHOIR.

In the second place, according to the custom of the orthodox German Jews from time immemorial, it has not been allowed that females should take part in the rites and ceremonies of the church by singing in a choir with males, and no such mixed choir hath hitherto existed, been permitted or organized in the church aforesaid, of which complainants are members. The bill further states that in violation of the constitution and the supplemental act of Assembly, a large majority of the members in attendance at a meeting of the congregation lately held, not constituting even a majority of the entire body of the members of said congregation, did by a vote determine to organize and use in the ceremonies of said church, a choir of both male and female voices, and such a choir is now organized, and the officers of the congregation have given their assent to the introduction and use of the said choir in the services. The complainants insist and charge that this innovation is in direct violation of the peculiar character of the doctrines and traditions of their Church, which prohibits females from taking such part in its rites and ceremonies, and as such it is an unauthorized and unlawful alteration and corruption, sought to be introduced into the present form of worship, rites and ceremonies of their Church. In the third place (the bill states) the said Chanun, who has been unlawfully elected, as aforesaid, for a term of five years, and who, by virtue of his office, is authorized occasionally by the President to deliver an address before the congregation, has not only from time to time in said addresses promoted doctrines which are not in accordance with the spiritual and temporal concerns of the orthodox German Jews, but he has also from time to time introduced important and unauthorized changes in the ancient form of worship by the omission of certain essential parts of the service and the addition of others not customary or allowable, and has thus taken upon himself to do what can only be lawfully done by a regular vote of the members of the congregation, in accordance with the charter and constitution thereof.

THE BOARD MUST ASSERT AUTHORITY.

The complainants state that inasmuch as the Board of Managers of said corporation are expressly charged with the duty of seeing that the provisions of its constitution and by-laws and ordinances shall be strictly observed, the said Board is bound to see to the performance of its duties in allowing the said election of Mr. HOFFMAN for a term of five years from the 1st of October, 1869, and in permitting the organization and authorizing the introduction and use of the said mixed choir in the church; and also in allowing the said Chasan to preach unsound doctrines, and to make unauthorized alterations in the form of worship and service in the church. After referring to the authority of the Court in the matter, the complainants pray that the above-named electors, officers and managers be enjoined and prohibited from allowing said ABRAHAM HOFFMAN to officiate as the Chasan of said congregation after the 1st of October in this year, unless he shall be lawfully re-elected to hold said office after that day; and also from allowing the use of a mixed choir of males and females in the religious services in the said church; and also from allowing any abridgement in, or addition to, the ancient and well-established form of worship, rites and ceremonies in the said church, until lately always in use, according to the customs of the orthodox German Jews. There has been no appearance of counsel for the defendants yet. Judge PHENNEY has directed that upon their being served with the usually required notice, the case should be set down for a hearing on the 20th of September.

Mr. Frelinghuysen's Letter Declining the Mission to England.

Ex-Senator FRELINGHUYSEN has formally declined the nomination as Minister at the Court of St. James, and though his letter to that effect to President GRANT was written in July, the matter has been kept quiet till now by request of the President. The following is Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN's letter to President GRANT:

NEWARK, N. J., July 27, 1870.

To the Excellency President Grant:

Permit me to express my appreciation of the distinguished honor done me in my appointment as Minister to England, an honor the more valuable because originating with one whose confidence I so highly prize. I received the official notification of my appointment on Friday, the 22d inst. Since then I have not before I have deliberately and dispassionately reflected on the question whether it was my duty to accept the office, and having come to the conclusion that it is not, I request that the telegram informing you of the result to which I have come, sent the day on the morning of Tuesday, the 26th inst., at which time the name of my possible nomination took shape in the Press, and the other on the morning of the 27th, as soon as I heard of my nomination, did not reach their destination in time to lead to the selection of another than myself for the position. Although my mind was fixed on this subject when I telegraphed, yet the most grateful sense of the honor conferred on me by the Senate on my confirmation, which, I am aware was, to a good degree, the result of a natural kind feeling toward a recent associate, and also an expression of views as to the national policy, has led me carefully to review the subject. In view of my domestic relations and duties, which I was gratified to find, in our recent interview, you appreciated, my own distaste for diplomatic position, and my conviction that there are others better suited to the office, I am brought to my first conclusions, and shall forward my letter declining the office to the Secretary of State. While I regret that my efforts to serve the public in addition of my name with this office were not successful, you will please permit me again to express my high appreciation of the honor conferred. I am, with much respect, your obedient servant,

FREDERICK T. FRELINGHUYSEN.

A Second Foil—Heroic Effort to Save Life.

The Kingston (N. Y.) Gazette says that on Thursday last a party of ladies and gentlemen were enjoying themselves at Minnie Kill Falls, near Gilboa, Greene County, when one of them, a young lady, named Miss GILL, being near a steep precipice, slipped and fell from a rock, a distance of over 120 feet, into the water below. The party, with one exception, stood transfixed with horror to the spot. This one was a young man belonging in Kingston, named Edward NEWCOMB, who, seeing the situation, at once went to the rescue. Scrambling from crag to crag he descended the cliff, and at last found himself in jumping distance of the water's edge, which he reached at a single bound. Without pausing a moment, he sprang into the water and caught the young lady in his arms and brought her to the shore. It was found she was in an insensible condition, and Mr. NEWCOMB at once bore her to a house a half mile away, when restoratives were applied, after which she was taken to her home, about a mile further on. She was found to be badly bruised and cut, but at last accounts was doing well.

The Norwalk Steamer—Coroner's Inquest.

The Coroner's inquest on the body of JOHN P. PEALON, one of the victims of the Norwalk disaster on the bay, was commenced last night by Coroner WHITEHILL. The deceased was a young man who resided with his mother at No. 436 West Twenty-fifth-street, New-York. The supposition is, that in the midst of the excitement created by the collision he either jumped or was knocked overboard. Several witnesses were examined, but none could tell how he got into the water. In regard to the circumstances immediately connected with the disaster, no new facts were elicited. The investigation will be continued to-night.

A Juvenile Homicide—Death of Young Kelly.

Coroner SCHIRMER was notified, last night, by the Sixteenth Precinct Police, that JOHN KELLY, aged fourteen, who was stabbed on the 10th of July last, by WM. CAVANAGH, another boy, died yesterday.
